Much About Prohibition
Morrow's Dilemma
2 Sailors + Bootleg = 2 Killed
Rogers, Babe and Suckling

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

AMBASSADOR MORROW'S hat is in the ring, and ardent prohibitionists are throwing stones at it.

The ambassador says the Federal government is too far away to attend to prohibition details in the states, says the prohibition law should be repealed, and prohibition taken out of the Constitution. Each state should be allowed to handle its own drink problem, just as it deals now with its horse thief problem, and divorce problem.

THE AMBASSADOR speaks kindly of prohibition, but that will not save him with prohibitionists, who, deeply convinced, demand ALL OR NOTHING.

IT WILL be an interesting campaign. Dripping wet Democrats complaining that Morrow is not dry enough, the bone-dry Republican running independently against Morrow.

The administration must be opposed to Morrow since it is drier than "India's Burning Sands."

MR. MORROW is capable. New Jersey with him as Senator would get more than with anybody else.

The state is notoriously wet. Mr. Morrow would probably be elected but for the fact that he is in favor of the League of Nations. Difficult situation for a man honestly seeking an opportunity to prove that one successful in business could be useful in public office.

WHILE MR. MORROW was telling New Jersey what he thought about prohibition, two sailors were shooting each other to death in the home of one at Lakewood, N. J. Good friends, they had served in the Navy for 12 years, had just been honorably discharged, agreed to celebrate, and did it with bootleg liquor. Both were found yesterday morning, riddled with bullets.

THE WALLS were spattered with bullets and blood, windows were broken, furniture smashed. One, Robert Evans, was dead, head crushed in; the other, Albert Duffy, two bullets in his head, two in his body, was mortally wounded. Fifty shots had been fired. It was the usual powerful bootleg whisky.

THE SECOND verse of the Eighth Psalm applies to Will Rogers. It says:

"Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast ordained strength."

Born on the lonesome prairie, his earliest recollection a ride on the sharp backbone of an Oklahoma steer, Rogers is a babe and suckling of nature. Yet he manages to put the truth so simply that even an Anglomaniac can understand him. Yesterday he said:

"It looks like our boys went after a treaty, and Japan's gang went after ships. Well, they both got 'em."

That's exactly what happened. Japan knew and demanded what she wanted and got what she wanted.

We wanted some kind of a treaty, any kind of a treaty, and we got it.

Perhaps the Senate won't swallow it.

MAUDE ADAMS will return to the stage. Younger than Bernhardt and Ellen Terry when at their best, about the age of Ada Rehan in her prime, and with intellect fully developed, she will be better than ever.

She made her first appearance on the stage when one year old. There is no danger of stage fright after a long rest.

BEGINNING JULY 1, German law will forbid the sale of liquor on pay days. That applies to "hard liquor," especially Schnapps, a whisky made chiefly from potatoes. Like other European countries, Germany discourages the drinking of highly alcoholic drinks. Light wines and beers are not affected by the restricting laws. They are not considered harmfully alcoholic.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, May 17.—Still held to earth by dozens of heavy sandbags, hanging on the rails like so many hands clutching at an escaping gigantic bird, the Graf Zeppelin is tugging and straining at its anchorage in the air dock here, impatient to get away tomorrow afternoon.

This will be another history-making voyage for the Graf, blazing yet another pioneer path through uncharted space. It will start at 5 p. m. Berlin time (noon Pittsburgh time.)

I am looking forward with the keenest eagerness to this, my third flight across the Atlantic. Flying thousands of miles over the ocean is no longer a novel sensation to me, but it still is and always will be an incomparable travel thrill, ever replete with real enjoyment—especially to one who knows this airship from one end to the other as well as I.

FIRST FLIGHT OF KIND

I have been through raging winds and dangerous storms, glorious sunshine and romantic, moonlit, star-spangled nights, but still—this is the first non-stop passenger and mail flight from Eu-

70,000 GATHER FOR KENTUCKY DERBY

Notables From Afar Among Gay Throngs; Gallant Fox Favorite, Course Dry, Fast

By DAVIS J. WALSH.
International News Service.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 17.—By the tape, it is only a mile and a quarter. By the watch, it is just a few seconds more than two minutes. To the eye, it is a series of split-second impressions that beat upon the retina until the conscious mind reels under the impact.

But there is nothing quite like it this side of the hereafter, and so the fifty-sixth running of the Kentucky Derby will play upon the heartstrings of a nation late this afternoon and make it hearken to the magic of its song.

A lone survival of romance in a day gone materialistic, the great race had drawn its crowd this morning from the world and its four corners. Seventy thousand people, the saturation point at Churchill Downs, will be there when they call the derby field to the post shortly before 5 o'clock, central standard time, and a census taker would have to poll the country in order to list them according to their homes.

EARL OF DERBY IN BOX

Dozens of special trains had brought them into town from Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Pittsburgh and other cities, and had housed them in the railroad yards overnight. New York and Philadelphia society was there, of course; so were visitors from as far west as San Francisco and Los Angeles, and from as far south as New Orleans.

The Earl of Derby himself will occupy a box of honor at the finish line and may make the presentation speech to the winning owner, although the governor of

TWO DOWNTOWN CAFES FACING COURT ACTION

Complaints Against Nixon And Plaza Due Monday; 'Show Boat' Ban Granted

Judge Nelson McVicar, in Federal Court today, granted a preliminary padlock injunction against the "Show Boat," in the Allegheny River at the foot of Sixth street, raided early Thursday by prohibition agents.

Sale of liquor on the boat is prohibited pending a final hearing set for June 23. Named as proprietors are F. F. Graham, George Jaffe, Louis Markowitz and Milton Jaffe. The John Eichleay, Jr., Company is designated as the owner.

United States Attorney Louis E. Graham informed the court injunction papers had been drawn up against the Plaza restaurant, 535 Fifth avenue, and the Nixon restaurant, Sixth avenue near William Penn way. He desired to scan these complaints, he said, before presenting them, probably Monday.

BLUE LAW VOTE SHOWS GAIN

Support of the Sunday Blue Laws by voters of East End wards, although in the minority, helps to reduce the wide margin favoring repeal in the Blue Law poll of Pittsburgh by the Sun-Telegraph. The total of ballots received in the poll to date, 12,040, shows the following division of sentiment:

For the Blue Laws	1,423
For modification	762
For repeal	9,855

The increase in the number of supporters of the law shown by the latest returns produces a ratio of about seven votes for repeal to one vote for continuance of the Blue Laws, compared to a ratio of 7½ to 1 previously.

Tabulation of the third group of wards includes the Eleventh to Fifteenth, which show the lowest average ratio for repeal, about 3½ votes for repeal compared to one vote for the Blue Laws. The totals to date are:

Ward	For Blue Laws.	For Modification.	For Repeal.
Eleventh	72	27	204
Twelfth	16	12	147
Thirteenth	92	32	270
Fourteenth	108	37	274
Fifteenth	38	32	243

Returns for the day from all wards added 1,714 votes to the totals and were divided as follows: For the Blue Laws, 259; for modification, 116; for repeal, 1,339.

Earle Loses Appeal In Balm to Dancer

LOS ANGELES, Calif., May 17.—(AP.)—Ferdinand Pinney (Affinity) Earle, artist now living in Paris, France, failed in his efforts to obtain a re-trial of the suit by which Miss Doris Salazar, young Parisian dancer, won a judgment of $17,000 against him for breach of pre-nuptial contract. Miss Salazar charged that Earle promised her $15,000 and a contract in motion pictures, but did not make good the promises.

BRITISH SILENT ON THAW VISIT

LONDON, May 17.—(INS.)—What the attitude of the British government would be toward a visit from Harry K. Thaw was unknown today. The home office refused to comment on his sailing on the Ile de France and the announcement of his plans to visit England after spending some time in France.

The last time Thaw attempted to land in England he was barred by officials under the guidance of the Baldwin administration.

It was assumed that he felt the Labor government under Ramsay MacDonald would not bar him.

Lindy On Business Trip to Capital

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(AP.)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh arrived in Washington late yesterday from New York. He was the guest of Clarence Young, assistant secretary of aviation of the Commerce Department.

"Purely business," Col. Lindbergh said regarding his visit to the capital. He said he expected to remain here "a short time."

SLUSH GROUP CONSIDERS TRIP HERE TUESDAY

First-Hand Investigation Of State Primary Fight During Voting Possible

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(AP.)—An unprecedented plan under which five Senators, members of the campaign funds investigating committee, would visit the polls in the Pennsylvania senatorial primary next Tuesday, was under consideration today by the committee.

Feeling that to station themselves at the voting places in strategic centers of the state, particularly Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, was the only way they could study for themselves the charges of irregular voting, several of the Senators advocated this procedure as the group gathered for a decision.

Chairman Nye, just back from a brief visit to Pennsylvania, would not divulge his ideas to newspaper men until after the committee's session. He had made a previous informal report to the committee.

WATCH DAVIS-GRUNDY RACE

As advanced, the program calls for five members of the committee spreading out over the state to watch the ballot casting in the race between Senator Grundy and Secretary Davis for the Republican senatorial nomination. Most of the Senators would go to Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, but other points also would be checked.

The committee has before it charges of irregularity in the registration of voters for the primary. Similar charges were advanced four years ago in the Vare-Pepper-Pinchot race.

Including also the election, the charges that year were not limited to the two metropolitan centers, and William B. Wilson, the Democratic senatorial nominee, demanded a recount in five counties, in pursuing his unsuccessful contest against Vare's election.

PLAN STUDY OF WATCHERS

The committe interest is not limited to the primary voters, but is directed at including in its study the activities of the watchers, who by Pennsylvania law are permitted to protect the interests of each party at the polls, drawing as much as $10 each for their activities.

Charges have been made in the past that the watchers have been stationed at each polling place in great numbers.

Hoover's Birthplace Loses in Population

WEST BRANCH, Ia., May 17.—(INS.)—This community, the birthplace of President Hoover, today sought an explanation for the loss of 37 members of its population in the last 10 years.

Census figures have revealed that the population at present consists of 651 persons.

Facetious Democrats of Cedar County intimated that perhaps the population had gone to Washington in search of federal jobs.

REDS FACE ENS' TRIBE TODAY

The Phillies have gone, but the Reds are here and if there is much chance to stage a game, the Pirates and Rhinelanders will fight it out at Forbes Field this afternoon. The last three afternoons have brought postponements.

Remy Kremer will face the enemy, Manager Dan Howley having his new ace, Bennie Frey, ready for mound action.

The two clubs will leave tonight for Cincinnati where tomorrow they will open a series.

The Ensmen will be back in town Wednesday to stage a series with the Cubs.

BALLOT VICTORS IN DOUBT

HARRISBURG, May 17.—One of the most amazing primary campaigns that rock-ribbed Republican Pennsylvania has ever witnessed roared into the home-stretch today with all the candidates claiming victory and no one, not even the so-called bosses, being very confident of just what is going to happen Tuesday.

The cross currents, the undercurrents and the conflicting eddies of this most unusual contest are such that even the most sage among the Pennsylvania prophets are chary of predictions.

Here in Harrisburg, the capital, from which political spokes radiate out to the mighty organizations in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, the prevailing opinion is that Gifford Pinchot will win the

Gold Star Mothers Take Paris Shopping Trip

PARIS, May 17.—(INS.)—The warm, impulsive spirit that is France today greeted 231 mothers of American soldiers who lost their lives on the World War battlefields of the homeland.

Early in the day, the Gold Star mothers were about seeing the sights of Paris and, more important, shopping.

Mrs. Sarah Thompson, of New York, was scheduled to place a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in the presence of the entire group.

Mrs. C. S. Smith, of Delphus, O., was confined to her hotel today in the care of a nurse. She was suffering from "intermittent amnesia," it was announced. She probably will be unable to visit her son's grave at Thiacourt.

Tuesday the entire delegation plans to make pilgrimages to the graves of their sons.

Women of France and officials vied with one another to extend a warm welcome to the American mothers, following their arrival at Cherbourg on the United States liner America.

NAVY CHIEFS SPLIT OVER LONDON PACT PROVISIONS

JONES JOINS BRISTOL IN ATTACK

Secretary Adams, Admiral Pratt Defend Treaty; Say U. S. Gets Parity

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—With hearings over until next week, members of the two Senate committees considering the London naval limitations treaty reviewed a mass of conflicting testimony today.

Four Navy Department witnesses who testified split over its merits or demerits. Secretary of the Navy Adams and Admiral William V. Pratt, commander-in-chief of the fleet and an advisor to the American delegation at London, agreed it was "highly advantageous to America."

Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, retired, also advisor to the naval delegation at London, and Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristol, chairman of the Navy General Board, termed the pact unsatisfactory and charged it failed to give America parity with Great Britain and Japan.

STIMSON SUPPORTS TREATY

Secretary of State Stimson supported the treaty as the best that has ever been negotiated of its type.

Opposition to the treaty has cropped in the Senate, led by Senator Johnson (Rep.), of California, and Senator Hale (Rep.), of Maine, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, which, with the Foreign Relations Committee, is holding concurrent hearings.

Senator Borah (Rep.), of Idaho, Foreign Relations Committee chairman, has not declared definitely for or against the treaty, but indicated he believed the American position would have been improved had more 8-inch gun cruisers been provided.

DELEGATES FAVOR PACT

Both Senator Reed (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, and Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic floor leader, agreed the treaty was a distinct advantage to America. These two accompanied the American delegation to the conference.

"My only apprehension is that in the course of these discussions things may be said which will be repeated against our interests in London and Tokio," said Reed. The British and Japanese delegates have the same problem in securing ratification. They have 'big navy' groups, too.

Reed declared he would like to see the United States build its navy up to the limits set by the treaty for 18 six-inch-gun cruisers. Admiral Jones recommended holding up the building of these cruisers as allowed under the treaty until 1936, to prevent America's being "frozen" into a position from which it could not escape.

RATIFICATION PREDICTED

Senator Swanson (Dem.), of Virginia, ranking minority member of both the Foreign Relations and Naval Affairs committees, predicted the treaty would be ratified.

Both the Foreign Relations and Naval Affairs hearings were slated to end next week. Additional members of the Navy's general board were still to be heard.

BYRD TO SPEAK HERE IN FALL

Rear Admiral Richard Byrd will make his first lecture of a national tour here during the annual congress of the National Safety Council, which will convene September 29 and continue to October 3.

Admiral Byrd, according to latest reports, is scheduled to appear in Syria Mosque October 1, where he will address the delegates and show pictures illustrative of his antarctic expedition.

Three Pittsburghers have been elected to the executive committee of the National Safety Council. They are E. F. Blank, safety director of Jones & Laughlin Steel Company; H. O. Allison, safety director of the Pittsburgh Railways Company, and E. H. Sykes, advertising manager of the Mine Safety Appliances Company.

Death of Worker Believed Accident

Catherine Smith, of Edgeworth, today expressed the opinion that her brother, Owen Smith, 32, of the Aliquippa Hotel, Aliquippa, whose body was found in the Ohio River, near Economy, yesterday, had not committed suicide. Smith toppled from the Aliquippa-Ambridge Bridge, Tuesday, according to a report given Ambridge police. The sister identified his body at an Ambridge mortuary.

Smith, who was an employe of the Aliquippa plant of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, is believed by his sister to have lost his balance and to have fallen into the water.

rope to South America, and its like another voyage of discovery to me.

It promises to be scenically and picturesquely the most beautiful sky excursion ever made. Not one day will pass that we will not see the gentle or rugged, green-tree-fringed on rocky coastlines caressed by the surf or tormented by angry waves.

Wonderful opal-colored islands will strew themselves in the path of the Zeppelin's swiftly-moving shadow on a peacock-hued sea beneath us.

4 CONTINENTS ON ROUTE

During this unprecedented 10,000-mile skylark we will fly over four of the world's five continents and visit seven countries, passing along or over hundreds of islands and cross the equator for the first time in history in a passenger airship.

From fascinating Seville, with the mighty pillars or hercules on our left, we swing over a corner of Africa along Morocco and the mysterious "Rio De Oro," geographic name of the gold coast, and the little-known French Mauretania to the palm-studded Canary Island, thence to the Cape Verde Islands.

WILL DROP MAIL

The next day we shall see the tip of the nose of South America in two brief days. Dropping the mail by parachute we will fly along the romantic coastline southward 1,200 miles to Rio De Janeiro.

It is probable, but not certain, there will be an hour or two landing at Rio, where a fast seaplane will be waiting to convey the Zeppelin passengers destined for Buenos Aires. Others desirous of remaining one day in Rio will also disembark, leaving the Zeppelin to speed back to Pernambuco to moor two days at the stub mast.

ROUTE LIKELY OUT TO SEA

The Rio sightseers will be enabled to catch up with the aerial liner by taking a Condor seaplane to make the connection at Pernambuco. All aboard once more, we shall sweep by the Amazon, the world's greatest river, probably far out to sea in order to avoid the thunderstorms hovering around that area.

Northward bound again, we shall be floating an entire day or more along island after island, beginning with the Barbadoes to Martinique and following the long crescent of the West Indies to Cuba, "the world's sugar bowl," and Havana, "pearl of the Caribbean."

We shall have a bird's-eye view of Key West and wonderful glimpses of Palm Beach and Miami, where I understand only American millionaires and billionaires live, and then on to Lakehurst and New York.

All this in 10 days, three days of which we shall be on the ground at Seville, Pernambuco, and possibly Dio de Janeiro and Havana. I am looking forward to seeing Rio and revisiting Havana, and I hope Dr. Eckener will land at both.

However, he is not yet certain. The fare to Lakehurst is $5,000. That is $500 a day or more than $20 an hour. I am sure everybody, at the end of the flight, will vote full value received.

DUCHESS TO SHARE CABIN

For the first time in all my flights I shall not have a cabin to myself. Capt. Ernst Von Schiller tells me I am to share a cabin with the Duchess De La Victoria of Madrid, a member of the Spanish royal family.

Because the ship is too full, two of the passengers, Dr. Badt, of the German finance ministry, and Capt. Breithaupt, a former Zeppelin commander, are being put with the crew in the breezy interior just above the billowy fuel gas bags.

There will be three of my companions on the Hearst-Zeppelin round-world-flight aboard. They are Dr. Jeronimo Megias, physician to the King of Spain; Dr. Gustav Kauder, a German editor, and Karl H. von Wiegand, America's famous "flying journalist," a man who has done more for the lighter-than-air aircraft cause than any other except Dr. Eckener and the members of his staff.

LEEDS TO JOIN PARTY

At Rio de Janeiro or Pernambuco we pick up a fourth member of the world flight, William B. Leeds, the American millionaire.

All the stamp collectors in the world seem to be sending letters or postcards on this flight. They are stimulated by the report that special stamps of the round-the-world flight are now selling for as high as $100.

The uneasiness and tension so marked at Friedrichshafen before the first trans-Atlantic and round-the-world flights is today completely absent. This time no more fuss is being made than if a steamer were pulling out.

DERBY LURING GAY CROWDS

the state usually functions at the ceremony.

It was almost universal belief this morning that the neck which arches under the floral horseshoe will be that of Gallant Fox, of the Belair stable. There were 15 colts and one filly nominated in the overnight entries, but only two of them, Gallant Fox and Tannery, the E. F. Pritchard colt, were given more than passing attention. The rest, including Crack Brigade, Gallant Knight, Gone Away, High Foot and Uncle Luther, were believed just so much background.

TRACK DRYING

The play on Gallant Fox figured to be so heavy that most of the others, except, of course, Tannery and the Bradley and Three D's entries, may be coupled in the field for betting purposes in order to stimulate speculation. It was regarded as not altogether unlikely that a few would be scratched.

The play on Gallant Fox figured to be stronger if the weather remained clear and the track was not sodden. The track, heavy from recent rains, was drying out like an old orange and racetime figured to find the going admirably suited to the speed of Gallant Fox, whereas Tannery ran the race of a true mudder several times last year.

FAME, FORTUNE STAKES

There will be a fortune in money and honor without price for the winner.

There is $50,000 in added money that goes to the winning owner.

Victory for Gallant Fox would equal the record of Sir Barton of being the only horse in thoroughbred history to win both the derby and the Preakness.

There is possibility of Tannery overturning calculations and becoming one of the few horses in derby lore to be backed down from 100 to 1 to a payoff at the wire.

Earl Sande, back in the saddle after leaving $70,000 on the doorstep as a trainer-owner last year, will ride Gallant Fox as never before in the hope of winning his third derby and equalling the age-old record of Isaac Murphy, a colored boy.

Inventor, Editors Fly to See Derby

The party was headed by Dr. Lytle S. Adams, inventor of the device bearing his name which permits an airplane to pick up a bag of mail without landing. Accompanying him were Lowell Mellett, editor of the Washington Daily News; Harry Stringer, news editor of the Washington Herald; Frederic J. Haskin, newspaper statistician, and Pitt Hand, of New York, an executive of the Adams Air Express Company.

Homestead Man, Hit By Automobile, Dies

Struck by an automobile while crossing the street Tuesday afternoon, Robert Leitch, 64, Eighth avenue and Baldwin street, died in the Homestead Hospital early today. William Coughlin, 1702 Soles street, McKeesport, alleged driver of the car, was notified to appear before the coroner.

Chill Night in Open Ends Girl's Wanderlust

Hitch hiking has lost its lure for Jean Hamilton, 15, daughter of W. H. Hamilton one of the agents under Federal Prohibition Administrator John D. Pennington.

Jean is home today, weary from a two-day tramp, relieved by an occasional automobile lift, to Cumberland, Md., and as far back as Uniontown, Pa.

She set out armed with a hunting knife, she informed Uniontown police, they reported. When refused shelter in a house near Frostburg, Md., she slept in the open, with no protection from the cold. Then she decided to return home.

She telephoned from a drug store in Uniontown to her father, who arranged for a policeman to go to the store and take her in custody until Assistant County Detective William T. Walker, formerly associated with her father, arrived and brought her back home.

MERCER COUNTY FOR DAVIS BY 4,000

Anti-Dry and Pinchot Vote To Leave Brown in Cold; Sharon Favors Secretary

(This is the third of a series of articles on the Western Pennsylvania political situation on the eve of the primary election. Every county has been stirred up by rival gubernatorial, senatorial and legislative campaigners. Local independents, who realize the state campaign may be won in the counties outside Allegheny and Philadelphia, are unusually active. A special Sunday article will deal with the political situation of the whole Western Pennsylvania district.)

By JOHN F. COWAN
Staff Correspondent.

SHARON, Pa., May 17.—Four thousand plurality for Secretary James J. Davis from Mercer County, where he spent his boyhood and began his career as a furnace puddler, is the forecast made by his Sharon supporters in estimating the results of his canvass.

Davis will make this showing, it is declared, despite the money which is being spent by the various business interests and political factions directing the campaign for Senator Joseph R. Grundy. The home town of Davis has been deluged with Grundy literature, and in this respect the Grundyites have injured their own cause by over-exerting themselves. Old neighbors of the labor secretary resent the expenditure by Grundy leaders as unsportsmanlike.

BROWN OUT IN COLD

The dry rural districts voting solidly for Pinchot and the industrial towns swinging a heavy anti-dry vote to Phillips, will leave Brown out in the cold, with Pinchot leading in the gubernatorial race by 1,000 to 1,500.

The balance of the Davis-Brown slate apparently will have smooth sailing here, and State Senator Frank Fay, of Greenville, candidate for another term, and Assemblymen Hugh M. Stephenson and Ray W. McKay, seeking re-election, have been indorsed by the organization and are said to have no serious opposition.

Crawford County, originally a Bull Moose pasture, will run true to form as far as Pinchot is concerned.

DAVIS VICTORY FORECAST

FRANKLIN, Pa., May 17.—Good news for Secretary James J. Davis in his race for the Senate comes from Armstrong, Indiana, Jefferson, Clarion and Venango counties, where it is predicted he will run 50 per cent ahead of his slate.

In Indiana and Clarion counties it is declared that scarcely more than 60 per cent of the registered Republican vote will be brought out. In Gov. John S. Fisher's home county there is a rally for his appointee, Senator Grundy, but the mining and industrial districts are making a strong showing for Davis.

Pinchot has a runaway for Governor in each of these counties. The rural vote is practically solid for Pinchot. In Jefferson County it is estimated that 12,000 Republican votes will be cast, and Ben W. Irvin, Pinchot chairman, claims 5,500 of these for his candidate. It is reckoned that Brown will get 3,500 and the Phillips ticket will have close to 3,000.

MAKE THOROUGH CANVASS

Under County Chairman Marshall Phipps, the Venango organization has made a sincere canvass in behalf of Davis and Brown and the entire slate.

Grundy is forging ahead in Oil City, but it is declared that his campaign, late in getting under headway, will not be carried successfully throughout the county.

Armstrong County will be carried by Pinchot by a large plurality.

Wood Alcohol Kills Four New Yorkers

'Spanish Custom' Bars Pittsbugrh Artist's Tip

MADRID, May 17.—(AP.)—Homer Saint Gaudens, Pittsburgh artist, has had an experience here which he describes as novel and refreshing. He offered a waiter a tip in a hotel where tips are included in the bill. The waiter refused it.

In Spain, he has found there are not two prices, one for Americans and one for residents. Prices are high, but high for visitors and Spaniards alike.

BRADDOCK GETS VITTOR MODEL

A clay model of Col. George Washington made by Frank Vittor, sculptor, for the hundred and seventy-fifth anniversary celebration of the Battle of Braddock, was presented to the committee in charge of the celebration yesterday afternoon in Vittor's studio, 1828 Fifth avenue.

Thomas G. McCleary, superintendent of Braddock schools and head of the committee, made the speech of acceptance. George A. Todd, president of the Braddock National Bank and head of the executive committee of the celebration, also spoke.

The clay model will be sent to New York, where it will be cast in bronze. The statue will be dedicated in Braddock July 7, the opening of the anniversary celebration.

O'Rourke Promoted To be Lieutenant

Public Safety Director James M. Clark today announced the promotion of Edward O'Rourke from a detective to lieutenant of the automobile squad. O'Rourke, ill in Mercy Hospital for the last two weeks, had been acting head of the squad for several years. The lieutenancy was recently created by Council.

John D. King, assistant police operator, was named police operator, succeeding Ray Miller, who died several days ago.

Crew Stays Aboard Grounded Freighter

WOODS HOLE, Mass., May 17.—(AP.)—The American freighter Kearny, bound from Boston to Baltimore, went aground today on Nobska Point, less than a mile from the Coast Guard station. Radio messages from the boat said the officers and crew would remain aboard. The Coast Guard cutter Acushnet and Patrol Boat 235 went to the Kearny to stand by.

DAWES TO VISIT U. S. IN FALL

LONDON, May 17.—(INS.)—The following statement was issued at the American Embassy here today in connection with the reported departure of Ambassador Charles G. Dawes for the United States:

"The Ambassador will not apply for regular leave until September, when he intends to go to Chicago for a month in connection with the exposition there.

"At the end of his leave he will return and resume his duties in London."

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Washington had been full of rumors about Ambassador Dawes' return to the United States. Some of the reports were that he was to help work for the naval treaty, others that he was to resign.

Drag Monongahela For Canoeist's Body

Residents of Elizabeth and West Elizabeth early today dragged the Monongahela River in the vicinity of the two boroughs in an effort to find the body of Carl Pascoe, 21, of West Elizabeth, believed drowned last night. Thomas Briggs, 21, of West Elizabeth, Pascoe's companion, was rescued by E. A. Heath.

Briggs and Pascoe were canoeing across the river toward their homes when the craft upset.

Three Children Hurt When Hit by Autos

SHARON, Pa., May 17.—Three children were injured when hit by automobiles. John Oravec, 12, and John Chizman, 6, were hurt, the former seriously, as their scooter was struck by a car, police said, operated by John Scardina, of Farrell, while Mary Dacey, 15, pupil in Brookfield High School, suffered with a fracture of the arm as she was struck by a machine on leaving the school bus.

Michigan 'U' Cobbler Dies; Long Friend of Students

ANN ARBOR, Mich., May 17.—(AP.)—"Doctor" Tom Lovell, friend of several generations of University of Michigan students, is dead.

The cockney cobbler, who carried the words "poet, traveler and free thinker" after his name and who claimed to be one of "the four great Americans—Washington, Lincoln, Roosevelt and Lovell," came to Ann Arbor 25 years ago from London, England. He died yesterday, 70 years old.

"Dr." Lovell mended students' shoes and sold autographed copies of his poetry to undegraduates. He also composed songs and considered "The Dickey Bird Song" his "greastest work." Several times he announced himself as candidate for president of the university and always maintained he would have been president "if the students had their way."

A favorite pastime of undergraduates was awarding "Dr." Lovell "honorary degrees" such as "WOL" (America's writer of literature) and "TNT" (thinker of new thoughts). "Dr." Lovell claimed to be the inventor of free verse. After he started charging $5 for accepting a degree the practice became less general.

A few years ago "Dr." Lovell was able to give up cobbling and devote his full time to selling his poetry and newspapers.

He will be mourned by 70,000 University of Michigan alumni.

METHODISTS SPLIT ON LIQUOR

Daniels Committee Said To Be at Odds on Report To Be Given to Bishops

DALLAS, Tex., May 17.—(AP.)—A reported rift in the ranks of the temperance committee of the quadrennial convention of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, headed by Josephus Daniels, former secretary of the navy, today promised new problems for the delegates.

Exact differences between members of the committee have not been announced. It was learned that disagreement is current over the body's report, which, when submitted, will be a pronouncement on the liquor question, written by Daniels, plus a large part of the report of Bishop James Cannon, Jr., secretary of the temperance board of the church.

DANIELS MAY BALK

The Cannon report was added, it was said, on motion of A. C. Millar, former governor of Arkansas, despite Daniels' objections. Some members of the committee today expressed belief that Daniels himself might not concur in the majority report and would support a minority report which George S. Jones, of Georgia, said he planned to offer.

Bishop Cannon, already center of a convention wrangle, growing out of the accusation that he had operated on the New York stock market, thus may be drawn further into the liquor report controversy.

The temperance committee rift appeared last night at a session in which Bishop Cannon was closely questioned. Mr. Jones, chief questioner of the church leader, finally was ruled out of order, it was reported.

It was voted to submit the committee's report at today's session, but Chairman Daniels late last night said it would not be brought before the conference until next Monday. Committee members could not explain why it had been delayed.

DEFER CANNON ACTION

The matter of Cannon's probable trial for stock market speculation was held in abeyance today pending another meeting of the episcopacy committee tonight, at which definite action was expected, followed by the first announcement on the status of the accusations.

Two sessions of the committee were held yesterday. Neither was devoted to consideration of the stock market charges, although both were productive.

At the first meeting, the committee passed upon the "physical effectiveness" of all bishops in the college. At the night meeting, it was decided to recommend to the conference today the election of three new bishops.

HUNT CANNON FUND IN QUIZ

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(INS.)—The Senate Lobby Committee investigators today were scanning the books and ledger sheets of Kable & Co., defunct New York bucketshop, to see if they could find trace of the $48,300 Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of Virginia, failed to account for in the anti-Smith campaign in the South in 1928.

The Kable & Co. records were made available to the lobby investigating committee by United States Attorney Tuttle at New York, after Senator Caraway (Dem.), of Arkansas, chairman of the committee, had asked for them. Tuttle wired Caraway last night the Department of Justice had consented to allow the Senate's star inquisitorial body to have them.

E. C. Jameson, New York insurance executive, has testified before the Senate committee he gave Cannon $65,300 in the anti-Smith fight in the South, and that Cannon instructed him by wire how to account for his money under the corrupt practices act.

Cannon, however, only accounted for $17,000 from Jameson in the returns filed with the clerk of the House, as required by law.

MOSLEM STAND RAISES FEARS IN INDIA

Mohammedan Sympathy With Palestine's Arabs Brings New Anxiety to British

BOMBAY, India, May 17. — (AP.) — Growing unrest among the Mohammedan population of India was viewed with concern in European circles here today. Coupled with progress of the Hindu civil disobedience campaign the situation provided a particularly disquieting outlook.

Moslems, who for weeks have abstained from participation in the civil disobedience campaign, now appear to be drawing near the Nationalist leaders through agitation of a cause entirely exterior to India itself—treatment of Moslems in Palestine.

Moslem quarters here observed a hartal, or day of protest, Friday in sympathy with the Arabs of Palestine. A number of Hindus closed their shops also.

THREATS VOICED

In connection with the hartal, the Moslems celebrated a "Palestine Day" and passed resolutions warning the British that if Moslem claims in Palestine were not satisfied the Mohammedans would take steps to compel recognition.

The Moslems staged a huge parade, carrying banners inscribed: "Down with the Balfour Declaration," and other pro-Arab mottoes. Mohamed Ali, Moslem leader, in a speech, declared that he viewed with grave concern "the oppression of Pathans in Peshwar."

Mohamed Ali announced that he had applied to the Bombay government for permission to see Mahatma Gandhi, Nationalist leader, in his prison at Yeroda, near Poona, and consult him as to measures of bringing about peace in India. He said that he also had discussed the situation with the viceroy, Lord Irwin.

POLICE "PASSIVE" ALSO

LONDON, May 17. — (INS.) — Police once again imitated the policies of Mahatma Gandhi's disciples today in India in meeting "passive" resistance with "passive" opposition, according to Central News dispatch from Bombay.

At Dharasana, where police sat it out for 28 hours yesterday with Mrs. Sarojini Naidu and her followers, constables met a new party of volunteers who wished to conduct a raid today on the salt pans in the city.

Squatting pleasantly in the middle of the road, the police adopted the same attitude as they did Tuesday with Mrs. Naidu.

Both parties continue to eye each other, according to last reports.

At Shiroda, however, police charged volunteers attempting to raid salt depots and several were injured. Two hundred were arrested.

RAINBOW PLAY DAY AT PITT

A lot of liniment is said to be in evidence today on the campuses of 13 colleges which sent girls yesterday to compete in Pitt's annual Rainbow Play Day.

Divided indiscriminately into eight equal teams, distinguished by the color of their uniform, the girls cast aside intercollegiate rivalry and concentrated upon helping their colors through to victory.

Contests of all kinds from "jacks" and hop-scotch to be held hockey and volley ball featured the day. Tumbling and archery, too, were popular.

Miss Margaret McClenahan, head of the Pitt Department of Physical Education, was in charge of the festival. The colleges represented were Pitt, P. C. W., Carnegie Tech, Duquesne, Geneva, Westminster, Grove City, Slippery Rock, California and Indiana State Teachers' colleges; Erie, Johnstown and Uniontown Junior colleges.

WHITE HOUSE TO REMAIN NEUTRAL

President Friendly to Both Morrow and Fort; Liberals Seek to Prevent Split

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 17. —The Hoover administration will adopt a "hands off" policy in the New Jersey senatorial primary, it was declared today in administration circles.

While Mr. Hoover has thus far turned down every appeal for support in a primary campaign, the New Jersey situation places him in a position he has not thus far faced.

Both Dwight W. Morrow, who has come out for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, and Representative Frank W. Fort, outspoken dry, are a part of the Hoover administration. Both are close to the President. Both have been entrusted with important tasks by him. Morrow as ambassador to Mexico and delegate to the London naval conference and Fort as floor manager at the Kansas City convention and secretary of the Republican National Committee during the Hoover campaign.

Liberal organizations of the country may choose between Morrow and Joseph Frelinghuysen to prevent Fort from capturing the Republican nomination.

Informal conferences will be held by leaders of the anti-dry organizations within the next week to determine upon a plan of action.

Dr. F. W. Buck, secretary of the Federal Tax Reduction Dispensary League and member of a national political council formed by 10 dry organizations here two weeks ago to begin operations in the 1930 campaign, announced he would consult other leaders in New York next week.

While the council was formed primarily to support anti-dry candidates in the fall election, the situation in New Jersey may force action in the primary, he said.

Dr. Buck added:

"I do not know just what the result will be with two candidates, Morrow and Frelinghuysen, running on anti-dry platforms, and Mr. Fort, an out-and-out dry. We should hate to see wet support divided between two candidates so that the dry would win in a state that is admittedly moist in sentiment.

"It may be that we will have to choose between Morrow and Frelinghuysen."

'SILENCER' BILL TO BE AMENDED

Mt. Lebanon Township commissioners promised to consider an amendment to the proposed "silencer" ordinance at their meeting next Monday night, the change having been presented at a meeting held last night. Members of the Mt. Lebanon Civic League and individual citizens extracted the pledge.

The amendment proposed by taxpayers stipulated that "Votes on such a proposed change shall be taken at the next regular meeting of the commissioners" instead of "the next meeting" as originally incorporated in the bill. The change, residents claimed, would eliminate possibility of voting secretly on the zoning measures.

That the commissioners lack the confidence of taxpayers was the assertion of Agnes R. Joyce, township auditor.

The league is seeking legal means to oust the majority faction of the commissioners for the alleged "political discharge of Police Chief C. C. Baldwin. The faction comprises Chairman Clarence Scheck, Charles Clatty and Ferdinand Vitte. Samuel Meneilly and L. C. Clark are the other members of the board.

WILD OIL WELL SPOUTS ON

OKLAHOMA CITY, May 17.—(AP.)—Workmen hoped today to curb the rampant Sigmon gusher which presented a new fire menace in the South Oklahoma City oil field.

Just half a mile east of "Wild Mary" Sudik, which blew oil and gas over miles of surrounding urban territory for 11 days, the well, operated by the Prairie, Slick and Phillips companies, went wild at noon yesterday when sand cut away a nipple above the master gate and prevented closing of upper and lower gates. Work of replacing connections began under great difficulties.

Lease men believed the Sigmon's daily flow, first estimated at 10,000 barrels of oil and 75,000,000 cubic feet of gas, had increased early today as the well, on the land of an Oklahoma City furniture manufacturer, continued to spout from the top and sides of its derrick.

$10,400 ASKED AS HEART BALM

Laura Schugar, 1611, Columbus avenue, has brought suit against Benjamin Browarsky, 5810 Aylesboro avenue, for $10,400 damages for a wounded heart.

The plaintiff through her counsel, Marshall & Marshall, claims that Browarsky promised to marry her, but that in August, 1929, with tears in his eyes, told her there were objections to his marriage to her. Later he broke off the engagement entirely.

Miss Schugar says the wedding was postponed from time to time after she bought the necessary outfit, including a fur coat and, asks $400 for her trousseau and $10,000 for wounded feelings.

Riots in Bucharest Over Prince Carol

BUCHAREST, Rumania, May 17.—(AP.)—Street rioting occurred here last night when police and soldiers prevented the distribution of newspapers containing forbidden articles referring to former Prince Carol. M. Filipescu, editor of one of the Bucharest newspapers, was severely injured by a police commissary.

Considerable excitement over the political situation was manifest in the capital this evening. Its cause was traced to a recent bitter attack by Vintila Bratianu in a pamphlet accusing the government of Premier Maniu of conspiring to bring about the return of Carol.

O.K. OF ROBERTS LIKELY SOON

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(INS.)—The nomination of Owen J. Roberts as an associate justice of the Supreme Court, will be considered today by a Senate Judiciary sub-committee, with all indications pointing to a recommendation urging his immediate confirmation.

Senator Borah, (Rep.), Idaho, chairman of the sub-committee, announced that unless some unexpected opposition developed, the sub-committee would file its report with the full Judiciary Committee Monday. This would allow a report by the full committee and confirmation by the Senate early next week.

Thus far, Borah said, there have been no complaints against Roberts' judicial qualifications or legal record. Unless some complaint is filed, Borah added, there will be no public inquiry.

This attitude was in sharp contrast to the successful battle against Judge John J. Parker, of North Carolina. After a hectic 10-day debate, the Senate rejected Parker, 41 to 39.

President Hoover thereupon named Roberts to the vacancy, caused by the death of Justice Sanford.

FAIL TO TRACE COOK'S KILLER

County detectives today had found no trace of the assailants of the unidentified Italian who was shot to death Thursday night in the Blue Moon Garden, a roadhouse, on the Frankstown road, Penn Township, where he was employed as a cook.

Guy Volpe, Wilmerding political boss, was committed to jail after questioning in connection with the shooting the same night of William Mundy, 40, of 2024 Collingwood avenue, Swissvale. Mundy was found in front of a barber shop on Hillside avenue, East Pittsburgh. In Columbia Hospital Mundy told detectives Volpe had shot him after accusing him of being a "double crosser."

The shootings are believed due to racketeer warfare.

Efforts to establish the slain man's identity proved futile. Vincent Zerra, one of the proprietors of the roadhouse, knew the victim only as "Tony." Zerra also is being held on a charge of violating the liquor laws.

Volpe refused to talk without counsel.

Frank Pingano, 253 Oak street, Wilmerding, and James Brushame, 124 Vine street, arrested in the Mundy shooting, were released today by the county detectives.

Stanley, deceased. Emil Vidal, 900 Railroad street, has been appointed judge for the Second District of Heidelberg Borough, in place of Nora Hale, who has moved. Mary McCoy, 4 Colliers street, has been named inspector for the same district.

Innocent Dependents at Morganza Barred by Law

Although there is a law forbidding the commitment of dependent or neglected children, guilty of no offense, to institutions where delinquents are confined, 25 or 30 innocent boys and girls are inmates of the Pennsylvania Training School at Morganza, Supt. W. F. Penn estimated.

Asked what courts had committed them, he said the cases he recalled had come from Greensburg.

Mr. Penn said that while it was not right to put dependent children in the same institution with delinquents, the courts were not so subject to criticism on this score, in his opinion, as offhand they might appear to be.

They chose the lesser of two evils, he said, the other alternative being to leave the children in surroundings where they would be much worse off than in Morganza.

The remedy for the situation lay, Mr. Penn said, in providing institutions where dependent children could be properly reared and educated.

He said there is also a law prohibiting the commitment of dependent children to the county almshouses, but that it was quite generally ignored.

Spaghetti Industry Alert To Repel Capone Entry

CHICAGO, May 17. — (AP.) — Let Alfonse Capone shed a racket tear over the spaghetti situation.

Invasion of the spaghetti manufacturing industry by him or anyone of his ilk will not, announces the Macaroni Manufacturers' Association, be countenanced.

"Sinister rumors," said C. J. Pettinger at a meeting of the association's trustees, "have reached us concerning alleged plans of Capone. I hereby serve notice that the vested macaroni makers are willing to cross swords or machine guns with the gangster element to keep him out of our business.

"We intend to carry on our business in the accepted American way. We want to increase the per capita spaghetti consumption in America from six to 60 pounds per year; but not by Capone methods."

Just what he had heard concerning Capone's intentions toward the spaghetti industry Pettinger did not say.

Cunning Bloomer Frock

Pattern 1883

Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

By ANNE ADAMS.

This dainty little style is quite simple, yet extremely effective. Tiny tucks at the shoulders give additional fullness and form a substantial ground for the button and loops used in fastening the frock. The V vestee and corresponding skirt hem are quite new and unusual made of contrasting fabric.

Pattern 1883 may be made of gingham, percale, broadcloth, pique, lawn, etc. There is a square pocket with the pattern, but we suggest an appliqued cat for delightful trimming. The embroidery pattern 572 consisting of cats, chicks, flower motifs, etc., is FIFTEEN CENTS additional.

Pattern 1883 may be obtained only in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8. Size 2 requires 2⅞ yards of 36-inch material.

No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model with our pattern. Yardage for every size, and simple, exact instructions are given.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins carefully wrapped or stamps, for each pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE wanted.

Our PATTERN BOOK of NEW SPRING and SUMMER STYLES is FIFTEEN CENTS, but only TEN CENTS when ordered with a pattern. Address all mail orders to Sun-Telegraph Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth Street, New York City.

1.—Enclose 15 cents in coins.
2.—Write clearly NUMBERS of patterns and SIZE wanted.
3.—Write or print your NAME and ADDRESS plainly.
4.—If you want SUN-TELEGRAPH Style Book send 10c extra.
5.—Address your request to

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Bride-Elect To Be Guest At Lunch

Rivaling country clubs as scenes of entertainments are country homes on Sewickley Heights, Coraopolis Heights, and all the heights near Pittsburgh. For weeks the estates have been put in readiness for al fresco summer parties.

A particularly attractive one is being planned by Mrs. George Schroeder and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. George Schroeder, Jr., who will entertain at a luncheon and garden party on Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the Schroeder home, "Oak Hill Manor," on the Butler pike, Wildwood, Pa.

And the guest of honor is a June bride-to-be, Helen Hoch, of Chicora, Pa., who'll become the bride of William M. Schroeder, son of the George Schroeders, on Saturday, June 7.

And now I have further news of informal entertainments. On Wednesday morning in the Wightman street home of Mrs. John R. Chislett, the Wednesday morning musicale group, of which Mrs. Taylor Allderdice is chairman, will present a young artists' program. And the program will be presented by Harriett Mawhinney and Nan Laudig, pianists; Edith Rosemary White, Mrs. Edward Klingelhofer and Henry Gill, vocalists, with Earl Mitchell as accompanist.

Dinner At Show

And now I must talk about the horse show, which is on everyone's mind now and will be until June 5, 6 and 7 have come and gone. The show will be in the ring at the Allegheny Country clubhouse as usual. There'll be ever so many dinners and luncheons in connection with the event, of course.

On Friday evening, June 6, the committee in charge of the show, with H. C. Bughman, Jr., as general chairman, will give a dinner in the clubhouse for the exhibitors and judges.

On the afternoon of the first day of the show the William Christopher Robinsons will give their riding and driving party as usual.

Women Golfers

Yesterday five golf matches were played by members of the Pittsburgh Field Club, on the club links, with the Shannopin Country Club, the Allegheny Country Club, Fox Chapel, Edgewood Country Club and Chartiers Country Club's women's teams as guests. After the matches, the club gave a luncheon for the six teams. Mrs. J. B. Kelly was general chairman of the affair and Mrs. J. B. Warmcastle chairman of golf.

Valley Events

Now before the really big social events such as weddings and debuts are at hand, many informal affairs are taking place. And today Mrs. J. Conway Macon is giving a luncheon in her Thorn street home, Sewickley, honoring her sister-in-law, Mrs. Latimer S. Macon, of Orange Court House, Va., who is the guest of her sister, Mrs. James Todd, in her Beaver road (Sewickley) home.

Tomorrow I hear that a large buffet luncheon is to be given in honor of J. Stuart Brown, in celebration of his birthday. And it is being given by his three sons, McCleane, Laurence and J. Stuart Brown, Jr., at "Upland Farm," Sewickley Heights. There will be about 100 guests present.

Debut Date

Dates for the Christmas holidays of 1930 are already being taken. The afternoon of December 22 has been taken by Mrs. A. P. Brill, of St. James street, for a tea at which she will present her daughter, Margare' Margaret has been a student at the French School in New York during the past year.

May Bride

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Myers, of Faulkner street, Sheraden, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Geraldine Myers, to Albert J. Wilson, which took place in the parsonage of the Wilkinsburg Methodist Episcopal Church on Wednesday, May 7, with the Rev. P. J. Chilchoote, pastor, officiating.

Mrs. J. R. Brady was her sister's matron of honor and J. R. Brady was the best man. After Thursday, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson will be at home in the Faronia Apartments, Faronia street, Sheraden.

Miss Mary Christine Gillen, of Pittsburgh and Kittanning daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Gillen, of Kittanning, and Gerard H. Nickerson, of Pittsburgh, son of Mrs. Sophia Grimme, of Portland, Me., were married Thursday, with Miss Margaret T. Butler and J. C. Fenn as attendants. After an eastern wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Nickerson will be at home in Mt. Lebanon.

Mr. Nickerson is a graduate of the University of Maine, and of Bliss Electrical College, Washington, and he attended Harvard University.

Miss Christine Coyle, daughter of Mrs. Thomas G. Duffy, of North Braddock, has named June 18 as the date for her marriage to Albert A. Wittchen, of Pittsburgh. The ceremony is to take place in St. Mary's Protestant Episcopal Church of Braddock.

* * *

At a bridge-luncheon given Saturday afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Thama, of St. Marie street, East End, announced the betrothal of their daughter, Miss Elizabeth G. Thama, to Charles E. Moss, of Pittsburgh, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Moss, of Wooster, Mass. The luncheon was given in the home of Mrs. C. O. Emrich, of Swissvale, and she and Mrs. S. C. Mullen were joint hostesses. No date has been set for the wedding, but it will take place some time in the fall.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Duquesne Commandry will hold a luncheon in the Masonic Temple, Collins avenue, on Thursday afternoon, May 22.

* * *

College Club Told About Primary

The vital issues of the present political campaign are the men themselves; the real issues are the men as you believe they will perform in the public service without subservience to any group. This was what Mark Shields, Pittsburgh newspaperman, told the College Club members at their weekly meeting yesterday in the clubhouse.

The afternoon was given over to an open forum under the direction of the legislative committee and among the questions asked Mr. Shields were: What are the vital issues of the campaign? What solution of the unemployment question do the candidates offer? What are the possibilities of a third party after the primaries? What would be the advantage of a rate board over the present public service commission? What is the power of the governor of Pennsylvania with coal and iron police? Should prohibition be made a state issue?

To the last question, Mr. Shields said prohibition should not be a paramount issue in the gubernatorial campaign, but it should be an important one in the senatorial campaign, to which statement he appended "mere repeal of the state enforcement law does not guarantee uninterrupted drinking, for national enforcement still stands." If Pinchot is nominated there will be a third party—an anti-dry ticket—in the field at the general election probably headed by Dorrance, he told his audience.

There was the usual tea at the conclusion of the talk.

Sponsored by the Young Women's Class of the Sheraden Community Church and for the benefit of Langley High School Band, 80 business and professional men of Sheraden will present "The Womanless Wedding" Thursday and Friday nights in the high school. W. Y. English, N. R. Criss and S. Clyde Scott, the last as "the bride's mother," are among the principals of the cast, which is being directed by Miss Ruth Hall.

Baby's Hand Injured In Electric Wringer

NEW FASHIONS EXPRESS OLD-FASHIONED IDEAS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,

PARIS, MAY 17.—It is evidently new fashioned to be a trifle old fashioned, as far as the evening frock and wrap are concerned. So many of the very newest frocks are distinctly of Victorian inspiration and are very reminiscent of the days when the word "bustle" could only be defined as a dress accessory. Tight little bodices with snug little folds to emphasize the line, pert little frills, loops and large bows placed half way down across the back of the skirt are some of the fashions of yesteryear that the modern designers do not disdain in their endeavors to give us a never ending procession of lovely clothes.

FLOWERS again bloom on chiffon and other frocks, not only in print form, but cut-out flowers to match the printed pattern compete with the natural variety as a shoulder decoration. Already we have seen ever so many frocks with shoulder sprays of flowers cut out of the matching fabric in exact simulation of the flowers used in the printed design of the frock. Such a touch gives added animation and interest to a frock of printed chiffon or crepe and bestows that "dressmaker" touch that is always so desirable.

THE FLOWERED frock pictured was worn by a guest last Friday at Ciro's gala dinner-dance, an event that is ever productive of interest to the fashion observer. In this model, large black and white flowers are scattered over a ground of chartreuse crepe georgette in a printed design. Flowers cut from the fabric make a shoulder boquet on the left side of the decolletage. A double peplum and deep flounce form the skirt. The bodice is partly concealed beneath a curving bolero which is quite short in front. The curving line is repeated in the peplum and flounce edges.

THE OTHER sketch is also of a frock sketched during the same occasion, and is of emerald green faille in a very fine and supple quality. The draping at the front of the bodice and that drawn over the hips from side to side is reminiscent of the eighteen-eighties and an amusing little looped frill placed half way down the back of the skirt might have been inspired by the more exaggerated bustle of that period.

Two Girls Perfect In Spelling Bee

BEAVER Pa., May 17.—Helen Sedicoff and Jeannette Nowling, both of Beaver Falls, are the champion eighth-grade spellers of Beaver County, each making a perfect score in the test.

Beverly Hills, Cal., May 17.

Democratic leader of the House, John Garner, of Texas, and ordinarily a mighty smart man, wants to divide Texas into five states, giving it 10 senators, so it would get us folks in the South a little more equal representation. Instead of getting eight more for the South, I would trade all I did have for a Senator Joe Grundy. Uncle Joe would fix us up a tariff down below that Montgomery Ward line that would soon have us so well off we would all turn Republicans. Numbers don't get you nothing. It's individuals that get you something. Yours, WILL.

Mr. Jackson, Film Sleuth, Now Proud Daddy In Real Life

By DOROTHY HERZOG

(Copyright, 1930, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, May 17.

TOM JACKSON (the detective in "Broadway," et cetera) is the proud daddy of a baby girl who debut-ed 'tother day. I am informed the babe's "temporary title" is Betty Lee. She weighs six pounds. Upon reaching the magnificent total of eight, her name may be changed, depending, of course, upon her attitude toward this name business.

"Hell's Angels" finally makes its premier here next week, May 20. I believe. First night tickets are selling for $11 per. Rather that is the asked price. Steepest yet stamped upon opening night durats in this town.

A NOMAD EMOTER

Constance Bennett declares since she has become a nomad emoter, trailing from studio to studio instead of parking on her contract lot, (Pathe), she understands how the little lad felt whose divorced parents insisted he spend alternate week-ends at their homes. One day he rushed to his mother with the following excited query:

"Mother, whose little boy am I this week? I'd like to know whether to study my Sunday school lesson or dig bait!"

Speaking of Connie, don't be agog if Gloria Swanson and her Paris-residing husband get a divorce one of these days and Connie announces her engagement.

IT WASN'T TOM MIX

Eva Shirley, of Los Angeles, writes to upraid me for printing that Tom Mix once starred in a silent version of "Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court." The hero of "The Connecticut Yankee," Miss Shirley pointed out, was none other than Harry Meyers and the princess was Pauline Starke. I was still so confident Tom had made this picture that I jingled the Fox lot and had the item investigated. But I'm wrong. He never did. He just discussed it a great deal. I'm safe, though, in stating that Will Rogers is so keen to transpose this Mark Twain yarn into talky celluloid that it may be his next picture.

Pauline Starke

I heard of a woman the other day who picked up a first edition of Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn" in a San Francisco bookstore for 50 cents. She sold it to a Hollywood book dealer for $75. Whee. . . .

Don't miss Marie Dressler and Polly Moran in "Caught Short." It's the scream of the current season.

Kennywood Opens New Picnic Season

John Robinson's Military Elephants and Billy Lorette, famous clown, opened the circus season in Kennywood Park yesterday as the Penn Township schools held the first of the new season's daily picnics. Under the direction of Dan "Curley" Noonan, the elephants are performing twice daily. Tomorrow Izzy Cervone's Band will play and the Kennywood swimming pool will be opened.

PARAMOUNT PARADES IN REVUE STYLE IN WARNER

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"Paramount on Parade" is the new feature on the screen in the Warner. It is the revue type of entertainment, showing moments of originality, moments of diverting entertainment and moments that may be considered rather tiresome.

It does present quite a galaxy of box office names. Maurice Chevalier, the French star, is prominent in a number of episodes. He depicts the origin of the Apache dance, chases old men from park benches and, vocally, sweeps the clouds with sunshine—or something. He is a real entertainer, is Maurice.

Ruth Chatterton is there in a French dramatic sketch, which sort of cramps her style. Dennis King is there in the gallows' setting from "The Vagabond King" and he sings a song that sounds all right even though you don't know what it is all about.

Clara Bow comes out dressed like a sailor and goes into song. Nancy Carroll clambers out of a great big shoe and does a song and dance. Leon Errol wrestles with a blanket and makes comic whoopee. Helen Kane teaches school in her boop-boop-a-doop manner. Gary Cooper, Richard Arlen and some of the other Paramount boys do a "hunting number." Skeets Gallagher bobs in and out as master of ceremonies.

We could go on like this for a long time. So many are in the cast. Why, even some of the movie directors make appearances. However, at least one more should be mentioned. This one is the feminine juvenile, Mitzi Green. She scores in impersonations of Monsieur Chevalier and of the blackface Mr. Mack.

The production has some sequences in technicolor. And these do brighten it up a bit. However, this technicolor isn't such a marvel. There is lots of room for improvement in its coloring. Yet, the screen—in spite of all the talk—is still in its infancy. So we hope that in the not-too-distant future color films may improve.

A commendable factor about "Paramount on Parade" is that it doesn't go crazy in an effort to attain scenic elaborateness. It may be conceded also that in the earlier days of the talkies, this production might have attained "knockout" class. But now—well, there have been so many of these movie revues. The novelty of them is gone.

8 Tech Students Awarded Prizes

Eight students in the college of industries, Carnegie Institute of Technology, were awarded prizes yesterday for high scholarship in the department of building construction by the Pittsburgh Builders' Exchange. The students, four of them seniors, three juniors and a sophomore, were given the prizes at a luncheon of the exchange in the Hotel Henry.

Postal Employes In Member Drive

GUILEFUL FU MANCHU FINISHED AT LAST IN THE PENN

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Everybody was having a perfectly gorgeous time at the Penn-Loew Theater yesterday. They had sung the "Maine Stein Song" with Dick Leibert to celebrate his return to the organ, and had sung it with real Ratskeller enthusiasm. They had cheered the popular Wesley Eddy when he sang "Old Man River" for those who prefer water. They had laughed over the Ten Tiny Tots, averaging 250 pounds, who came out as Chester Hale Girls.

George Seibel

And then Dr. Fu Manchu escaped from his coffin—and for 80 minutes or so everybody gasped and groaned—and occasionally they hissed the villain.

INFRINGING ON JULIET

The wily Oriental, likewise sinister, likewise implacable, had merely stolen the potion of Juliet when she is put into Capulet's tomb, and he does a Houdini to dupe Inspector Smith and Scotland Yard.

Next he abducts a bride by means of an airplane, just as the ring is to be slipped upon her finger—and he uses her as bait to get the man he has sworn to murder, who loves her.

Sax Rohmer wrote the book, and Warner Oland plays the villain in true diabolical fashion. O. P. Heggie is his Nemesis, and finally Fu is blown up by his own bomb and is drowned in the Thames to make sure he's dead.

But maybe he will rise again a little later to pursue his career of vengeance. You can't keep a good villain down.

A SIGH OF RELIEF

Everybody heaved a sigh of relief when the stage show started again, and the Three Kings danced upon Fu Manchu's grave. Then the Chevalier Brothers indulged in festive acrobatics to celebrate his demise. Even Nat Spira and Edna Howard sang gleefully, and David Pesetzki's orchestra played with triumphant vigor.

Yes, indeed, Fu Manchu was dead, and his devilish hate had been foiled, and Inspector Smith could take a day off to do an old-fashioned waltz with the Ten Tiny Tots.

'JOURNEY'S END' ON SCREEN NEXT WEEK

The screen version of the widely acclaimed war drama, "Journey's End," will open an engagement in the Sheridan Square Monday.

Vilma Banky opens on the Harris screen today in "A Lady to Love," a talkie. Mercedes, heralded as a "mental marvel," appears on the stage.

Cherrington Here For Talk Monday

Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, will speak at the weekly luncheon of the Hungry Club in the Fort Pitt Hotel Monday. His topic will be "Prohibition the Best Way to Handle the Liquor Question." His address is one of two on the prohibition question arranged by the club committee. Harry G. Samson will preside.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

Plea

You mourned me for a proper interlude,
But doubtless found seclusion rather dull;
For now I understand you have renewed
Your interest in males, my beautiful.

I'm quite relieved to know that our affair
Has left you still susceptible to men,
That though a certain type is hard to bear—
They're others that are something else again.

I, too, have been a diffident recluse
And shunned the wiles of many a tempting lass,
But now that you are once more on the loose,
The bars are down—so kindly let me pass;

In case you catch me out with two or three—
I trust you'll smile your prettiest at me!
—The Local Masefield.

Another George Arliss?

The clowns are now saying that if Grover Whalen hadn't been made police commissioner he would have gone into pictures.

Merciless Truth

His tag is Bill Black and he is from Pittsburgh. He was thrilled in one of the asylums when Texas Guinan agreed to dance with him. The music and the dim lights probably made Black blue or gushy, for he cooed:

"Miss Guinan, have you a certain feller?"

"Say," she retorted, and broke the spell, "how can you be certain of any feller?"

Iamgine!

Among other difficult-to-believe happenings in this amazing village of ours is this matter of fact. It happened in the Silver Slipper, one of the better cabarets, the other midnight-to-yawning.

One of the town dandies ankled into the place and two of the girls in the show joined him after the performance. He ordered the more expensive steaks and other trimmings for them, and treated himself to a steep-tariffed dish or two. Then, when the $20 check was presented, he remembered that all he brought with him was a ten-dollar bill. What to do?

Rather than ask the management to trust him for the amount and let the ladies know he didn't have much coin on him, he excused himself and went to telephone a pal to bring over some cash. But the pal's number didn't answer and the operator returned his nickel.

When the nickel was returned to the slot $14 in quarters accompanied it!

Ummmm!

Recommended to New Yorkers and those Who Wouldn't Live in New York "if you gave it to 'em:" The creamed chicken on toast with hominy at the Colony; the hamburger steak sandwiches with chopped onion on huge rolls at Reuben's; the breaded veal cutlets with Lyonnaise potatoes at Sardi's; the chili at the Chili Villa; the rice pudding at Dinty Moore's; the ham and cabbage at the Tavern; the Steak Albert sandwiches at the Silver Slipper; the Southern fried chicken at the Cotton Club; the minute steaks at the Stork Club; the squab chicken at Woodmansten Inn; the chicken fried rice and mushroom sauce at the Abbey; the pot roast and potato pancakes at Dave's Blue Room; the deviled ham with cherries at the Central Park Casino; the lobster with sherry on it at the Ambassador Hotel grill; the saurbraten at Luchow's; the sirloins at Connie's Inn, and the pork and beans at Childs.

In the Good Old Days!

Speaking of gossips, the modern gabbers pale into insignificance when one reads the items printed in the New York Owl, which flourished on the East Side in 1878.

These items are picked at random from The Owl:

Martin Laier, of 112th Street better buy some tooth powder and clean his teeth . . . J. A. Gardiner had better stop fooling around Sarah and Mary Brown down on Chrystie Street or Emma B. will bounce him! . . . Edward A. Hogan, of Park Street better keep away from that red-haired girl on Elm Street! . . . If John Thaam don't stop fooling with Rosa C., of 3rd Ave., her big brother will be after him, etc., etc., etc."

52 Years Old!

And recently confrere M. Hellinger told an interesting tale contributed by Jack Lait, of King Features. Mr. Lait pointed out that the slang term "racket" was originated by a Chicago lad about 20 or so years ago. So that the records will be kept clear for future historians, let us quote from the above mentioned New York Owl from its issue of Aug. 3, 1878.

Reported The Owl: "G. Marks and Abe Cohn HAVE A NEW RACKET now of promenading Clinton Street dock. The Owl stood watching their antics the other evening."

Many an odd piece of furniture can be picked up for a very small amount from the "Household Goods" column of the Classified pages.

BANCROFT IS BRUTE LADIES LOVE IN ALDINE

By MILDRED FILLMORE

Who said clothes make the man? We are here to tell you whoever did was wrong. Or, if they were right, they said it before the movies arrived.

We cite, for proof, the new picture in the Aldine. It is titled "Ladies Love Brutes" and it has George Bancroft as the brute in question. And though George gets all "dolled" up in a full dress suit, he remains the roughneck. Clothes make him none the less awkward in handling a teacup or in making love. Neither does fashionable dress bother him when he gets into a fight. He just pushes those fists of his right and left to victory.

ROMANTIC BRUTE

Bancroft is seen as an Italian who makes a lot of money in the construction game. After his money days arrive, he falls in love with an aristocratic lady, who is estranged from her husband. And, for a time, it appears that he and the lady, after her divorce comes through, will wed. But two young boys stand in the way—one, the son of the Italian in a previous marriage; the other, the son of the aristocratic woman.

AND DOES HE, BATTLE

Due to the scheming of some bad men who loiter in the plot's shadows, the picture comes to a thrill climax in which the heroic brute must decide between his own son and the son of the woman he loves. And Bancroft decides all right and follows his decision with some rough and tumble battling that gets him a bruised face and gets freedom for both of the boys.

Mary Astor plays the feminine lead and she does a nice piece of work. She is a very different and a more talented Miss Astor than we knew in the old silent days.

GARY COOPER PLAYS HERO-BANDIT IN ENRIGHT FILM

"The Texan," a picturization of the O. Henry story "The Double-Dyed Deceiver," opened yesterday in the Enright. Gary Cooper has the hero role, and Fay Wray appears as his leading woman.

The story has to do with a gallant bandit who dupes an old and wealthy Mexican woman into believing he is her long-lost son. The bandit's idea, of course, is to get the lady's money. But a fair and young senorita is about, and he falls in love with her and changes his mind about stealing the old woman's cash.

The happy ending arrives eventually. But before that there are a lot of melodramatics and shooting.

Other entertainment includes organ music and screen shorts.

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's Question: Do you think couples contemplating marriage should be psycho-analyzed to determine whether or not they are suited to each other and whether or not they will be happy?

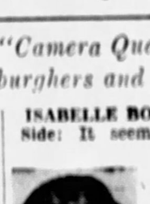
BEATRICE YOEST, secretary, Bloomfield: I don't think that would be at all necessary. Persons thinking of marrying know how they appeal to one another without going to the trouble of being analyzed by the methods of psycho-analysis. I think such a procedure would be foolish.

Miss Yoest

MARY MAGEE, stenographer, Wilkinsburg: No, I think it is entirely unnecessary for any one to have to resort to such methods. Psycho-analysts are wrong in their deductions most of the time. Their interference in affairs of couples might make for unhappiness rather than happiness.

Miss Magee

ISABELLE BOLLINGER, North Side: It seems silly to think that a psychologist is necessary to determine whether or not happiness will result in marriage. Millions of happy marriages were made long before this so-called science was ever thought of, and I'm sure that millions more will be made without it.

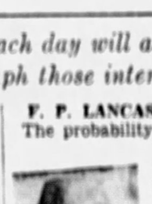


Miss Bollinger

JOHN HOSEK, Jr., North Side: It would not be a bad idea for a lot of couples thinking of marrying to get analyzed. The way a lot of marriages are turning out nowadays, should cause a lot of them to submit to analysis in an effort to prevent such difficulties in their own match.

John Hosek, Jr.

F. P. LANCASTER, East End: The probability of the matter is that psychology might have something to do with making marriages happier, but it is doubtful whether young couples would take advantage of the opportunity to submit to analysis at what they are sure is the happiest time of their lives.



F. P. Lancaster

C. P. WILSON, North Side: I'm afraid that the average couple, contemplating marriage, don't think anything like psycho-analysis when the time comes for the jump into the sea of matrimony comes. They are sure that they'll get along all right. That's all that really matters.

CHICKIE By ELENORE MEHERIN

Chickie Writes Her Parents That She Has Position

CHAPTER LXXXVIII.

The month of her vacation was drawing to a close. Jonathan wrote a letter. It had a high rollicking note. All the sentences ran merrily together, though at every two or three was a large impressive period.

He told Chickie all the news of the block—Mary dropping in of an evening to keep them company; Martha Blake bringing a jar of chowchow she had made; an automobile sliding down near their house and the driver injured—

Then this paragraph sneaking in at the end: "Just you wait, Chickie girl! You won't know our old mansion since the artists started on it—one on the inside and one on the out. And what they've done to your room! But I won't tell you a word and don't ever let your mother know I've given you a hint. Mind now—"

Chickie read this letter walking along the white, dusty road. . . . October—but the sun was in her eyes. They blinked. She sat down suddenly on a little pile of dead hay. She covered her face with her hands.

That night, not mentioning the receipt of her father's letter, she wrote. She wrote in a feverish excitement, the pages lighted. Any one reading would fancy hers the gayest heart in the world. She told of a job offered her—secretary of a New England Farm Bureau and it was an undreamed-of-opportunity and a perfect miracle that it should come to her.

The Farm Bureau was to establish permanent offices in Boston and she would be located there with a salary of $200 a month and a chance to work into a big executive position. She had all the qualifications so Mrs. Vale, secretary of the whole organization, told her. Mrs. Vale liked Chickie, even suggesting that she intended to retire and Chickie might then be ready for her place and her salary of $350 a month. Of course she wasn't counting on that. But wasn't it thrilling that she should get a chance like this just now when she really hated the work she had been doing. Oh, yes—she hated her old job—hated it and hated it! That's what made her so tired lately. Hadn't they noticed? Mitchell was a terrible crank. And then this salary—think of having $60 a month extra!

Father Sends Advice

Of course, she'd have to be stationed up here for a month or two till they had the Boston office ready—but then she would be traveling about from one state to another and all her expenses paid. Why—she'd have the most gorgeous time.

So what did they think of that? Why she was just hoping with excitement over it and wouldn't they please write immediately and say for her to grab it quick. She wanted it like anything, and she'd never get such a chance again. They knew how it was with opportunity and only knocking once! So hurry and say "yes—yes!"

She pictured the two of them reading that. She saw them raise proud eyes and smile—that Chickie of theirs—smart—well, was she! They wouldn't deny her—never stand in her way. She knew that. Then only a month or two and this brilliant future in her hands—

How well she read their hearts—simple hearts, easy to hurt; easier still to delight. Jonathan wrote—a bit formal this time, for it was an occasion of dignity.

"Chickie girl, your mother and I are pleased. We rejoice with you in this opportunity. But we want you to be cautious. Now, you have had four years and more of business experience, and you should be in a position to think and judge for yourself. We don't want you to be carried away with the thoughts of sight-seeing and traveling. We want you to remember that any one who receives $200 a month must work hard for it. So we advise you to make careful inquiries; to weigh the matter well. Then, if you still believe this is a great opening, we are willing that you should take it.

Answers Their Letter

"You'll not be so far away, even for these two months, so we'll expect you down over week-ends, Jennie and I are lonesome, so we count on this, but we don't want our feelings to interfere with a chance that may mean happiness for you. So you write at once and tell us. Most likely you'll come home for a few days before you take the job? If you don't, I'm afraid your mother will be downcast about it. She's got surprises for you, Chickie girl. She wants you to see them. You remember what I hinted about, don't you?"

She cried reading that. She could see Jennie padding about her room, putting up new curtains, drawing them back with bright cords, standing aside, her head cocked, proudly surveying her work.

And when Chickie didn't return, Jennie would go again into the room. She would draw down the shades. There would come a hush—a darkness in the happy place that had been hers.

But she sent a blithe response:

"Old Darlings—Dearest Old Loves: I knew you'd let me have it! I want it so! It's even better than I thought. I signed up yesterday—a contract, you know—very formal. And I'm to begin work at once, so, I guess, we can't have the visit for a while. But just as soon as ever I can, I'm coming down. Oh, maybe you think I'm not just dying for a sight of you. I can't dare to think how much I want to hug you, Jonathan, darling. Last night I dreamed that you and Jennie were standing at the bed and looking down at me. And you both kissed me again and again. You don't know how that made me feel. Honestly, when I woke up my face was all wet—so I suppose I must have cried. But, just the same, this is a job that only comes once in a life, and I never hoped for such a chance. So now I want to take it. It won't be so long up here—then think of the great times we can have on $200 a month. Why, I'm going to buy a little automobile, and we'll step some—us three"—

Yet, Jonathan in his answers did not understand why she couldn't take a run down on a Sunday. She was driven, and she wrote:

Jennie Sends Gifts

"What do you think, darling? Talk about luck and golden spoons. But here I've only been on the job a week and now they're going to send me along on an inspection tour of the mountain counties. Isn't that salubrious, though! I'll act as secretary and carry a little portabel typewriter, but, oh—the fun. Now don't write back melancholy, mother dear, because if you do it will take away all the joy. I'll only be gone six weeks or two months—well, about that long, and all my life I'll have this richness to remember. It's wonderful to travel. You ought to listen to Agnes Robbins. It makes me envious. And then, I'm getting all my expenses and a salary besides. So there—and there!

"Keep sending the mail to Rutland. There won't be any postoffice in places where we go, but I'll write every single day.

They accepted it. Jennie sent her a beautiful blue sweater and a scarf and woolen mittens. She'd need them—indeed, she would—going where there was snow.

Oh, the letters she had to write in the weeks after that—telling of things she had never seen—making up incidents.

And now it was November. One day Agnes Robbins said to her, "Is all your sewing done?"

"I have lots of time."

Keeps Busy Sewing

She was somewhat insistent. "You ought to do a little. It will take your mind off things. You're lonely. Why, dearie, your eyes are red half the time. You cry too much. That's not fair, you know—"

Chickie laughed: "Oh—life isn't always fair—do you think? Did you find it so?"

But Agnes had Billy drive them in the farm car to town and they bought many things. After this, Chickie sewed. She took the things to her room and sat at the window. Often she pricked her fingers. They bled. Sometimes she would cry with impatience; other times she laughed at the hurt.

Then she would sit with folded hands and wonder with a terror at her heart. She would grow rigid in this fear.

The face of little Bertie Groom when Agnes had slapped him filed often before her mind. She might have a child like that—despised—Oh, no—No! She'd see to that!

But just how would she see to that!

One day she broached the matter to Agnes Robbins. She saw the woman's snapping black eyes narrow. It was but an instant's doubt that lighted them. It weighed on Chickie like a mountain. Oh, she wouldn't try that again—

Agnes might suspect—might ask her to go—

Household Hints

New calico prints and lace curtains are hard to wash owing to the lime in them, but if you give them a nights' soaking in warm water in which two or three handfuls of salt have been dissolved the lime is freed and the task is lightened.

To render a fabric fireproof, dip in the following solution:

Dissolve ¼ lb. ammonium phosphate and ½ lb. ammonium chloride in three pints of hot water. The solution is ready for use when cold and will keep for a considerable time.

By FAY KING

When a man is in love he instinctively wishes to fetch and carry for his girl.

Whether he has small means or a large fortune, he acts accordingly.

But the man who accepts gifts and waiting upon by some girl is more in love with himself than he is with her.

A real man despises being obligated to a woman and he invariably turns from the woman who helps him.

How many foolish girls have cooked Sunday dinners for years for some fellow, only to have him suddenly elope with a girl upon whom he so willingly showers the fruits of his first success.

Madge's Father Decides to Keep Police in Ignorance

At my excited comment concerning the bald-headed motorist whose antics had so annoyed us, my father smiled at me indulgently.

"You are a close observer, Margaret," he said. "I am glad you did not miss that little point."

"Then you knew—" I asked breathlessly.

"That he was shaven like a tonsured monk?"—my father smiled again. "Yes, I knew, or, rather, suspected. It was so clever a piece of work, if really simulated, that I could not be quite sure."

"But if it is true, it means—" I began breathlessly.

"That the man really was watching and trailing us," my father replied composedly.

"Yet you made no attempt to have him detained," I said.

"Unfortunately," his tone was indulgent, "it is not a crime to shave one's head nor to repair a car in a vacant yard—although I might have asked the owners to bring an action for trespass against him"—he smiled at me, and I flushed at his raillery. "But, jesting aside, of course with this"—he touched the inside of his waistcoat, where rested the tiny insignia which proved his connection with the government secret service, "I could have had him detained, but to what purpose? Granted that the bald-headed motorist is a criminal of parts—I imagine he is one of those men so touted in mystery tales—but so rarely met with in reality, who can change their facial appearance at will—it would be of no advantage to us just now to have him laid by the heels. We want to find out what it is that these mysterious people really want—more important than that we want to find out who they are. There is only one way to do that—give them all the rope they want. One important fact we've handed to them on a platter this afternoon."

"You mean they know that we have put something valuable in the bank vault?" I queried.

"Yes, this trailer no doubt considers it is the thing his gang are after, whatever that may be."

He put his hands upon my shoulders and swung me toward him, looking down steadily into my eyes.

"I'll put it out of my mind at once," I told him. "But—what can I wire Mrs. Brixton about 'The Larches?'" I looked significantly at the disordered room.

"Wire her that she can have it at the price the agent named, and that it is in readiness except for the necessary going over. It was given the usual fall cleaning, I understand, after Princess Olina moved out."

"Yes, Mrs. Tiger did the work, therefore it was done well. Then—all this can be cleared away?"

"Tomorrow—or tonight, if Mrs. Tiger wants to get at it so soon. There is no evidence of crime here, and if anything has been taken from the house, it is something which I can easily pay for and replace myself with the agent or owner being none the wiser."

"Mrs. Tiger looked around and was sure nothing was gone," I told him.

"Just so," he replied. "Therefore, as I told you, I am not going to report this to our worthy local police. I shall go down and get my flashlight camera and my finger print stuff. There are finger prints on these glasses and dishes. My methods may be a bit archaic, but they are effective—I can get the photographs I want. That done then Mrs. Tiger can make short work of the disorder. Then we'll close the pages on this episode and hope it will be a long time before we have to open them again. Come, child, we must get out to Jim, or he'll be dashing in here, revolver in hand, with the idea that a rescue is needed."

The Marry-Go-Round

Where Are the Husbands of Yesteryear?

Alas, for that lost Yesterday! That sweet day of the "Marrying Man"—before the coming of the automobile, the golf craze, the jazz mania, the flapper, the bachelor flat, the night club, the sheik and the gigolo!

Somebody should write a book about the Vanishing American Husband. Like the buffalo and

The only way to be sure of getting married, these days, is to jazz a man to the altar before he is old enough to know where he's going—or after he's too old to care. And even when you've got him there, he probably won't stay PUT!

* * *

The old-fashioned husband, like the old-fashioned buggy, used to last a lifetime, with care and good treatment. But the modern husband, like a motor car, begins to get unreliable, skiddy and wobbly after two or three years.

* * *

A woman's impulse to boast about her husband's accomplishments is based on the same subconscious brand of vanity as a man's temptation to brag about the fish he hooked.

The divorce problem could be solved very easily if some clever efficiency expert could invent a system by which a modern woman could marry her second husband first and be done with it.

"Self-expression" is all right until a husband gets it confused with self-assertion or a wife gets it all mixed up with self-indulgence. Then it has a way of developing into what looks like just plain, old-fashioned selfishness.

Life without a love interest may be endured—just as one can go through a seven-course dinner without an appetite—but it's apt to be very flat and insipid.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Use the Parks

Beautiful and useful are the parks of a great city. To thousands of persons they give the benefit of the out-of-doors, a place to play and a place to rest.

DR. COPELAND

Those who have the benefits and joys of the country little realize what multitudes there are who cannot get out of the city. The thousands who live in the tenements of the city find in the parks recreation and better health.

Every human being and animal must have fresh air and sunshine in order to live. The first early days of summer are times when the very thought of getting out-of-doors gives new life and impetus to the day's work. The more one has of these blessings the longer will he live.

Most of the city parks are natural beauty spots. As such every adult and every child should enjoy them to the full, but not despoil them. Do not litter them with papers and boxes. Leave them as clean as they should be.

Get out into the parks as often as you can, in the direct sunlight. The cool breezes stimulate and rest the nerves, and whatever exercise you can get is so much to the good for your health.

Every person needs new inspiration and you can get plenty of inspiration in our beautiful city parks on the sunny days. Did you ever get up in the early morning for a good brisk walk down one of the parkways? How much better off we would be if we did this every morning. You are just as physically fit as you make yourself. Why not try this for exercise and inspiration in the early morning hours?

Maybe you don't have to spend all of your recreation time in the park. Perhaps you own a car. A day spent in the country can be most beneficial. You spin over hill and dale, past seashore and countryside, seeing the beauties made by God and man as you go. Beautiful gardens, the deep, cool woods, a tumbling stream or a distant lake, all make up a beautiful kaleidoscopic picture in your mind's eyes as you return to rest.

Talking of beautiful gardens, it is a beautiful and gracious custom in many places to have the gardens of large estates opened to the public on certain days of the week. More people should take advantage of these lovely spots. There is a mental stimulus and satisfaction of the spirit which we derive only from the beauties in nature. Everyone needs it. It is almost as important to our well-being as fresh air and sunshine.

For those who cannot get to the seashore or countryside the parks offer beauty, rest and recreation. Take the family there often. You don't always need a Coney Island. Get out into the quietness of the park, under the green trees. Take a picnic supper with you. These warm days are the time to make up for the long winter months indoors.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Convenience of the Salad Knife

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. Is it proper to use the knife and fork in eating salads and hors d'oeuvrs? I have always been cautioned to use the fork and avoid the knife whenever possible. Now, from an authentic source, I learn that through a recent change, the fork and knife are both to be used.

2. When making introductions, what is the correct form of making a lady and gentleman acquainted. Should the man's name or the lady's name be mentioned first?

S. E.

1. Yes, indeed, it is correct to use the knife, as well as the fork, when we eat salads or hors d'oeuvrs. In fact, there is a distinct tendency, in this country, as the custom has always been abroad, to use a knife as well as a fork for all courses where this is convenient. For canapes served at tables, for instance, for hors d'oeuvres, for the fish course, for the entree course, for the main course, for the salad course and for the fruit course. For the dessert course there is also a tendency, a distinct tendency to place both a dessert spoon and a dessert fork.

So if you have in your mind to "avoid the knife as much as possible" I advise that you erase this edict from your mind, and reconstruct your idea of the thorough convenience of the knife.

And when you realize the convenience of the salad knife—for instance when you eat hearts of lettuce salad or iceberg lettuce, or endive, or rounds of pineapple—you will never return to the use of the salad fork only.

Many silversmiths now make special salad knives.

2. The gentleman is introduced to the lady, and usually her name is mentioned first:

"Miss Lady, may I present Mr. Gentleman?"

Or more informally and casually, you may mention only the names: "Miss Brown, Mr. Smithson."

Engagement Presents Unnecessary

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Do you think it improper to go to an engagement party of a very dear girl friend without giving her a present? I expect to give her a very expensive present when she gets married in the fall.

MISS J. M. D.

Telegram of Congratulations

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When a person sends a congratulatory telegram to an engagement reception because he or she is unable to call, is it proper for the bride-to-be to acknowledge it? F. G. S.

Yes.

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

Meet some of the correspondents!

"Mrs. Gene Gordon," who signed herself that, and gave her address as "Mud Springs, Nebraska, Route 3," is the loser by deceiving me, if she did that. At any rate, a woman in California who wanted to help her sent her some valuable thing which was returned, and the postmaster said there wasn't any such person or place. It served her right. I'd like to hear her explanation.

A self-satisfied bachelor who wrote that he chuckled every time he thought of having kept his neck out of the matrimonial noose, got a sock from a lady in Brooklyn, who says:

"He is dead. We are put here with a debt to pay and it is always due till we pay it. Let that fellow sleep. He isn't worth waking."

There! Take that, Mr. Bachelor.

A woman with money writes me that she wants another husband, hers having died, because she is a home woman, good cook, has a child of 8 and wouldn't mind marrying a widower with a child. She wouldn't be a burden, because she has money.

Now fancy anybody like that loose in the world? If a man wouldn't care enough about you to take care of you, if you made him a good home and cared for his child, why would you want him? You aren't putting much value on yourself. The trick in life is knowing when you are well off.

"Tad" sends coals from New Castle, Pa. He says that "B. P." gets under his skin because she believes that all men who don't belong to big business are "dull and stupid." He adds: "There must be at least one interesting male among her acquaintances, and in this country that should be enough. I think her ideals need inspection. Lincoln didn't have business ability, but you wouldn't call him dull and stupid. He was a MAN. "B. P." would probably find her "brilliant business man" just another husband after she married him."

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

When applying the make-up keep in mind that the eyes are the most interesting of the facial features. Rouge placed high, creeping up on the lids, makes the eyes brighter and fresher. It is a mistake to place factory blushes low, leaving a white space between cheek bones and eyes. The lobes of the ears should be pinked a bit.

The chronically red nose is either the result of a well-defined skin disorder or the result of high living, late hours, rich food, disregard for simple hygienic laws that are necessary for our well being. If the nose flares up now and then ointment of zinc oxide is recommended. It should be applied every night after the skin surface has been cleaned well with warm water and a bland, neutral soap.

Bleeding gums can often be cured in one hour by the dentist who wields his carving knives and hatchets. The bleeding ensues because tartar has lodged at the base of the teeth, causing the gum to recede and break. When the tartar is removed, the gums grow strong, hold firmly to the surface of the teeth. There is no more bleeding.

Oily hair is benefited by a change of the shampoo medium. Rubbing the bar of soap on the heavenly halo is bad business. Particles of the soap adhere and gallons of rinsing water will not remove them. Unless the suds are thick, lively and crackling, the shampoo is likely to be a wash-out. Oiliness is often nothing more than soap scum accumulated through years of ineffective head scrubbings.

Horoscopes

Sunday, May 18.

Sunday's horoscope holds very fortunate aspects for cultural, clerical and churchly interests, but social, domestic and romantic affiliations may be subject to some inharmony or dissatisfaction. There may be also extravagance or financial perils. Loans are not advisable. Literary pursuits should thrive.

Those whose birthday it is may have a fairly active year with all pertaining to contracts, letters, publishing and promotion under fortunate rule, but there is some financial hazard through extravagance, loan or careless use of funds. Likewise there may be some personal inharmonies or friction.

A child born on this day may be talented and versatile, but its tendency may be toward personal extravagance or the careless use of money. Its social or domestic life may have its trials. It should excel in literary pursuits.

Monday, May 19.

Monday's astral operations point to fairly active and enterprising conditions, with the prospects of some change or journey and a substantial advancement of the interests through diligence and application. There may be some danger through indulgence in sharp or sarcastic speech or writings.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of fairly prosperous conditions, attained through diligence and well-directed effort. There may be change or travel, but steadiness and favors of elders may assist to solid benefits. Avoid caustic speech and litigation.

A child born on this day may have a ready and caustic tongue which may bring difficulty through law, but it should be enterprising and hard-working and have good success through its own merits as well as ingenuity.

STEEL OUTPUT HOLDS UP WELL

By B. E. V. LUTY.

Steel production is better sustained than usual at this time of year, when ordinarily the decline to a low midsummer rate is in full swing. There is really no well defined "normal" conduct for steel, there being what may be called an ordinary course, subject to exceptions when conditions are unusual.

In the five years from 1923 to 1927 the average decline in steel production from the high month to July was 27 per cent, while in the last three of those years the average was 22 per cent. In 1928 the spring peak was a month late and the trough a month early in June, because the year was preparing for an unusually active second half. Last year there was exceptional activity, throwing the peak into May, with June only a trifle behind, monthly decreases following.

SUMMER DULLNESS

Thus exceptionally active years have had little midsummer dullness, and now there is reason to expect that this year, a relatively dull one, will be the same way, having smaller than usual decrease. The heaviest steel producing rate was in February, at 85 per cent of capacity. Declines in the last three years have been small, and the rate in the week now ending may be estimated at 77 per cent. A 70 per cent rate next July would represent a total decrease in tonnage of 17 per cent from the peak, and that is just about what seems likely from the present outlook.

There is no sign that fundamental or general business conditions are improving enough to take steel far out of an ordinary swing from the paces it has been following since the end of January. The slowness of the present decrease in production is rather to be attributed to buyers not having anticipated their spring and early summer wants to the same extent as in previous years.

NO GAINS SEEN

With the important exception of line pipe, which has just lately been very active, with much demand still in prospect, the various lines of steel consumption promise no increases from their recent rates, and in some cases decreases are probable. For several months past, finished steel prices have not made as good a showing as steel tonnage. It is not only that prices have declined, they now show in several cases no definite arresting of the declining tendency. In some products there has been no clear cut market at any time recently.

Considering finished steel prices as a whole, by a composite which the writer began compiling 20 years ago, the level is now nearly $2 a net ton below the low point of late 1927, and is the lowest since the summer of 1922. From the low of late 1927 there was a quick though slight rebound. There was not much advance afterwards, so that the market really has not lost a great deal since it began weakening last August, and it is rather the trend that is unfavorable. There is little doubt but that the Steel Corporation would have formally announced reductions in certain lines if there had been a prospect that the market would then be stabilized at such figures.

MORE VISITS TO MAUSOLEUM

Increasing public interest in the Mt. Royal Memorial Mausoleum, located on the Pittsburgh-Butler pike above Glenshaw, is indicated by the steady gains in the number of visits made to the structure which is coming to be known as Pittsburgh's Westminster Abbey.

The mausoleum was dedicated a year ago and since that time the increasing number of visitors has shown that the belief that this city has a definite need for such a permanent institution is fully justified.

East Liberty Day Set for July 29

Tuesday, July 29, has been selected as the date of the fourth annual "East Liberty Day" outing in Highland Park by the general committee planning the affair for the East Liberty Chamber of Commerce. In case of rain, the outing will be held Thursday, July 31. Andrew Shaner is chairman of the general committee.

Gulf Production's Darst Creek Well

HOUSTON, Texas., May 17.—Gulf Production Company's No. 1, Dix McKean well, in Darst Creek Field, has been completed flowing 22,000 barrels of crude oil daily from 2,250 feet. The well is the second largest in the field.

Trade Increase Indicated by Checks

The volume of business for the week ended May 10, as indicated by check payments, was more than 13 per cent greater than for the week ended May 3, and 1 per cent greater than for the same week in 1929. Operations in steel plants during the latest reported week were slightly less than activity for the preceding week and below the level of the corresponding week in 1929.

Wholesale prices showed a slight decline from the preceding week and was 8 per cent lower than a year ago.

Bank loans and discounts, at the end of the week, while showing a slight decline from the previous period were more than 3 per cent above a year ago. Prices for stocks showed a loss from the preceding week and were 11 per cent below the same week of 1929.

PLATE GLASS IMPROVED

Demand for plate glass was in some better volume the past week, due principally to increased activity on the part of the jobbing trade. In other sections of the flat glass market comparative quiet held sway, according to the American Glass Review.

The increase in demand for plate glass, while not pronounced, was sufficient to lend encouragement to the situation, with several factors pointing strongly to a continued improvement in distribution of this product. While the relatively largest increase in volume of new business placed with the manufacturers this week was from the plate glass jobbers, a gradual improvement in demand on the part of the automobile and other principal consuming industries was in evidence.

Following the furniture shows being held this month both the number and size of orders from the mirror manufacturers are expected to show a substantial increase. In the meantime demand from this source continues rather light. Despite the more favorable trends, it is generally conceded among leading factors that a return to normal in the plate glass industry depends largely upon the extent of operations at the automobile factories.

Mexican Eagle Oil Production Lower

LONDON, May 17.—Production of the Mexican Eagle Oil Company for week ended May 3 was 235,000 barrels against 236,000 in previous week and 239,000 two weeks ago.

NEW BRIGHTON, Pa., May 17.—Eighty-five operators and bus drivers of the Beaver Valley Traction Company voted to accept a new two-year scale, in which wages remain the same as prior to April 30.

Stock Exchange Topics

Stock Market Strikes Rut Similar to That of Early January

With the volume of trading tapering off to the smallest total since the early part of January, barely 2,000,000 shares changed hands in the course of yesterday's five-hour session, the financial community viewed the market as approaching the "cross-roads." Stocks have been in a trading rut since the recent reaction culminated little more than a week ago, and while there is not much to go on in the way of outside news, the Street believes that a break out of the trading range on one side or the other is possible early next week. A similar period of inactivity preceded the late January and February rise, with trading for a full day having reached its smallest figure in that period on January 13, when only 1,452,000 shares changed hands.

Back of the offer of the United Corporation to increase its position in Columbia Gas Wall street believed it discerned the driving of a good bargain by the latter company. Acquiesence of the Columbia management to the proposal was looked upon as foreshadowing a period of substantial growth for that company. So far as Columbia Gas is concerned, the deal with United is regarded as destined to open up big new markets for the natural gas resources of that company. It is expected that Columbia will soon be carrying its product into Philadelphia and its environs via the old oil company pipe lines acquired about a year ago, the capacity of which, company officials say, is equal to the capacity of the present manufacturing gas plants in Philadelphia.

The sharp contractions in foreign trade for April and the first four months of the year, as set forth in the merchandise figures put out by the department of commerce, were looked upon as a reflection of the slowing down that has been experienced in trade activity the world over. The shrinkage in exports, both for the month and for the year to date was generally ascribed to the sharply lower range of commodity prices now as compared with this time a year ago. Shipments of wheat and cotton have been substantially smaller in volume than last year, and the same holds true of copper metal, where foreign buying has improved tremendously of late.

A forecast of domestic gasoline consumption during the next five years, made by the Standard Statistics Company of New York, in its current survey of the oil industry, gives the estimated gasoline consumption in 1930 as 408,300,000 barrels; 1931, 444,600,000 barrels; 1932, 478,600,000; 1933, 509,400,000; 1934, 536,500,000. The survey points out that the figures represents an average expectancy based on past trends operative over a long period of time and in no way can be construed as an attempt to forecast actual totals to be realized from year to year.

Farm machinery manufacturers have been steadily building up productive capacity to the extent that a total of over 150,000 tractors can now be produced in a year. This figure is about 500 per cent above the production in this country in 1916. In the present year, still further amplifications have been made, reflecting the fact that tractor manufacture represents one of the most lucrative departments of the trade. In 1919 there were only about 82,000 tractors on farms, but it is estimated that at the close of 1929 there were about 853,000 such machines. The pronounced world-wide trend toward power farming is continuing irrespective of crop values.

Another cut in Pennsylvania Oil prices, coming within a few weeks of the last downward revision, was looked upon in oil trade circles as merely a reflection of the increasing competition which producers there are feeling. The situation is regarded as local in character and not as foreshadowing similar action in other fields.

RETAIL TRADE SHOWING GAIN

Mercantile Agency Says Seasonal Goods Moving At Slightly Better Pace

Business both at wholesale and retail has been showing slightly greater activity, particularly in seasonable merchandise, the sale of which has been stimulated by the high temperatures prevailing, according to R. G. Dun & Co.

Jobbers of men's and women's wearing apparel report improved demand, and there has been particularly strong demand for men's straw hats. Movement of dry goods continues in fair volume, although not quite up to normal.

Sales of hardware, as a whole, are not entirely satisfactory; builders' lines in particular being slow of movement. Lumber and brick are moving rather slowly, but demand for cement is well maintained, and sales continue to average about the same as a year ago.

Construction work, particularly of residences, is not up to normal, and demand for supplies naturally continues rather slow. A fair volume of business is being continued by grocers, but confectionery and tobacco jobbers report business rather unsatisfactory.

OPERATIONS GAIN

The rate of industrial operations is at a slightly over-average, with steel mills operating at about 75 per cent, and prices in some lines showing further recession.

While the demand for heavy electrical equipment is well maintained, electrical fixtures are in considerably lighter demand than a year ago, and prices have shown a lower tendency. Manufacturers and dealers in plumbing and heating supplies complain of lack of demand, and prices have shown a downward trend.

OIL OUTPUT

The production of crude oil is averaging slightly higher, although further efforts are being made to cut the rate of production.

The production of bituminous coal continues at a rate about 10 per cent lower than a year ago, with no material improvement in demand. Western Pennsylvania grades of run of mine coal are quoted per net ton at mines as follows: Steam coal, $1.25 to $1.75; gas coal, $1.55 to $1.75; coking coal, $1.50 to $1.75; steam slack, 80 cents to 90 cents; gas slack, $1 to $1.10.

While there has been a slight improvement in collections, jobbers report the average rather slow.

Bond Issue Sought By General Bronze

NEW YORK, May 17.—A special meeting of stockholders of the General Bronze Corporation has been called for May 26 to vote on authorization and sale of $5,000,000 10-year 6 per cent debentures convertible into common stock, unless called for prior redemption after July 1, 1930, to and including January 1, 1931, at $35 a share and thereafter until maturity at $40 a share. The corporation proposes to sell $3,000,000 of the debentures through a group of bankers.

TEST BUREAU SAVES CITY MONEY

Director of Public Works Reviews Results Shown By Scientific Studies

By EDWARD G. LANG,
Director of Public Works.

Due to the fact that the city of Pittsburgh purchases all of its materials and lets all of its construction work according to specifications, it has become positively essential to have trained and experienced technical men in the Bureau of Tests.

Furthermore, there are constantly arising various problems requiring the services of capable scientific investigators. New materials, new methods and new ways of application are continually being developed and the Bureau of Tests has been able to furnish authoritative information on these subjects. In these days of high-powered advertising and salesmanship, exaggerated claims, bright promises and colorful words, only scientific analysis and tests can determine the real quality and true facts.

The Bureau of Tests does a great amount of work for departments other than the Department of Public Works and also writes many of the specifications for the materials purchased by the city.

TRAFFIC HEAVY

The City of Pittsburgh lays approximately 500,000 square yards of bituminous pavement and 100,000 square yards of maintenance work each year. Part of this work is on the main thoroughfares or heavy traffic streets and part on residential or light traffic streets.

The asphalt division in the Bureau of Tests is a new division, recently created to supervise the materials and design asphalt mixtures for stability and permanance. The terrific increase in traffic has caused new problems that can be solved only by careful scientific study.

SAVES MONEY

The value received by superior quality of materials accepted, in accordance with good specifications and rigid inspection, far exceeds the total cost of the Bureau of Tests. The laboratory is the best insurance and one of the cheapest institutions maintained by the city. It accomplishes the city testing and inspection of materials at less than half the cost commercial laboratories would charge. Every great corporation has its well equipped laboratory, because it pays.

Street failures alone have been decreased 93 per cent in the last four years, due not only to better materials and inspection, but to better organization and better business methods by those in authority.

BUILDING TRADE IMPROVED

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Evidence that the volume of legitimate contract construction, despite a decrease in gross dollar value for all building, is now greater than at the same time in either 1928 or 1929, is revealed by a statistical study just completed by the Associated General Contractors of America, which also shows that a new all-time high record was established in the total award of surface pavement contracts during the first three months of the year. The total of these awards increased 63 per cent over that of the first quarter of 1929, the study indicates.

Bearing out its earlier predictions that there is to be an exceptionally large volume of engineering construction this year, the association's analysis discloses that long term state and municipal bond issues for the first quarter ran well in advance of the same period last year, totaling $106,000,000 for March and averaging $96,700,000 monthly as compared with $68,200,000 during the first quarter of the previous year.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

LOW-RENT FLAT MOVE OF WIDE IMPORTANCE

Manhattan Program for Better, Cheaper Housing Of National Interest

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER.

(Copyright, 1930, Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, May 17.—With a revival of general business prosperity hinging to a significant extent on the prospects of an increase in residential building, the proposals of Borough President Julius Miller in Manhattan for a program for low-rent tenements are of more than local importance.

In getting pledges from 25 leading builders to start construction within a year on better grade cheap apartments, Mr. Miller was moved primarily by a desire to stop the exodus at the rate of 65,000 persons a year to other boroughs of the city. The aim is to demonstrate that attractive rooms can be produced profitably to rent for an average of $21 a month.

Evidently this consortium of private initiative and public officials does not believe that New York is overbuilt on this type of building. This raises the larger national question as to whether the country is overbuilt. Much opportunity for employment of labor hinges on the answer given to this question. Undoubtedly, there has been overdiscounting of future requirements in some sections of some cities, especially in relation to apartment houses, apartment hotels, and other speculative ventures. President Hoover, who has given the matter careful study, does not believe that the country is overbuilt on individual homes.

BETTER QUALITY NEEDED

Although there is no physical housing shortage, the problem must be analyzed from the standpoint of quality of dwelling. In the slums of New York and of the other great cities there are vast rows of obsolete tenements which are inconsistent with present-day notions of a decent standard of living. Irrespective of whether there are enough buildings standing, there is a great insufficiency of buildings of satisfactory standards in the poorer sections. Socially, there is an immense housing shortage from the standpoint of quality, if not of quantity.

The basis for the post-war American prosperity, which has been temporarily interrupted, was the replacement of goods of a lower standard with commodities of a higher quality. The job of raising the standard of living has not yet been completed. In view of the need of business in general of stimulus from residential building, Borough President Miller's enterprise is of national importance, and should be examined, if not emulated, by civic leaders in other communities which have not yet made a thoroughgoing job of modernizing housing conditions. As President Hoover has indicated, the great impulse for prosperity in the years that lie ahead may come from the war to abolish poverty. With productive facilities somewhat excessive and capable of further expansion, the business need is to augment consumption.

In this social undertaking, the great life insurance companies and savings banks, which hold vast pools of capital as trustees for men and women of limited means should encourage with financial aid all soundly conceived projects of this character. They should not hang back and leave these crucial questions, which bring prosperity or depression, to routine clerks in the loan department. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company has shown real leadership in offering building and permanent loans for the Miller plan at 5 to 5½ per cent.

INVESTORS BUSY

The decline in brokers' loans this week indicates that genuine investors took advantage of the recent slump to rebuy some stocks from marginal speculators. Studies by the statisticians of the New York Stock Exchange indicate that as a rule in such swapping back and forth between investors as a class and speculators as a class that the former get the best of it.

Of course, Congress is a political, not an economic, body, and it would be presumptuous for the business community to dictate to the solons. Yet objective observers recognize that what Congress does or fails to do has at least a temporary effect on the ebb and flow of prosperity. The long bickering over the tariff intensified the factors making for a disposition on the part of business executives to hold off. The fear that Congress may be on the rampage, as suggested perhaps in the recent Senate resolution offered by Carter Glass, of Virginia, formerly secretary of the treasury, to investigate the operation of the banking laws with special reference to credit facilities provided by the Federal Reserve System for speculation in stocks, also tends to restrict a revival of venturesomeness. Some experienced and seasoned financiers have told me that they consider the resolution ill timed and likely to disturb confidence. Wall street and big business, if they could write their own ticket, would doubtless ask for a moratorium on political interference at least until prosperity has been restored.

STEEL INQUIRY GAINS HERE

CLEVELAND, May 17.—The Mailly Metal Trade says that structural steel inquiry is gaining moderately at Chicago although actual awards are 25 to 30 per cent under a year ago. Moderate improvement in steel wire demand also is noted in the district.

Most car building plants are operating at high rates although several in the Chicago territory are virtually down. New car buying is not so active. Some betterment in strip steel orders is reported at Pittsburgh, chiefly from automotive consumers.

The recent cut in prices on bars, shapes and plates has tended to check buying for the moment since consumers are not willing to buy until they are assured the bottom of the decline has been reached. Prices now generally are down to 1.70c, Pittsburgh on shapes and plates, and 1.75c on bars. Copper is holding at 13.00c, Connecticut Zinc is firmer at 4.60c to 4.65c, East St. Louis. Lead is unchanged at 5.45c, East St. Louis, and 5.60c, New York. Tin is lower with spot straits quoted 32.50c.

RIDGWAY PLANT TO EXPAND

RIDGWAY, Pa., May 16.—Another addition to Rigeway's industries was announced Thursday, when the Elliott Company made known plans to add floor space of 45,000 feet. The estimated cost will be $250,000.

The present office will be torn down to make room for the new part, and the office will be re-erected on another site.

Drop in Silver to Hurt Commodities

A sharp drop in the price of silver has depressed most of the silver currencies in the Orient to new low levels. The Chinese rates at Hong Kong were particularly affected and descended to a value equivalent to the Indian rupee. This will tend further to aggravate the unfortunate price condition now existing in world commodity markets, according to students of foreign exchange.

Forbes

Some Encouraging Developments in Business World

By B. C. FORBES

SOME CHEERFUL news items:

Wilfred W. Fry, head of N. W. Ayer & Son, Philadelphia, the largest advertising agency in the United States, remarked to me the other day that their business thus far this year has eclipsed all previous records. And all indications are that 1930 will continue to show generous gains. These facts suggest that many important organizations are not timidly pulling in their horns, but are going after business more aggressively than ever before.

The many millions of business now done yearly by this house contrasts with the few meager dollars' worth of advertising placed by its founder, F. Wayland Ayer, when he started over 60 years ago. His very first introduction to advertising was thus described to me by Mr. Ayer:

"A Philadelphia book publisher for whom I had started to sell books called me into his office one day, took me over to a window and, pointing down to a business street, said with great conviction, 'All those houses should advertise. There is 25 per cent commission in it for you. Why don't you take up this line of work?' After careful thought, I did.

"During the whole first week I didn't get anything that looked or smelled like an advertisement, and I used a lot of shoe leather and spent what was for me a considerable sum on street car fares. It was disheartening, but I made up my mind not to become discouraged. On the following Monday I booked my very first order for $200. When 20, I opened an advertising agency with my total savings of $250.

"Advertising was then looked at askance. There was no fixed price for space, the motive was 'get business, suitable or unsuitable, honest or not, at the top price whenever posible, at any price when necessary.'

"Our whole force consisted, in addition to my father and myself, of one bookkeeper. I was floor-sweeper, messenger-boy, window-cleaner and everything else that was beneath the dignity of a bookkeeper. I stayed late every night to save clerk hire, took a very modest room close to our office to avoid traveling time and expense, and usually went home only on Saturday night to be with my parents every Sunday."

TO MR. AYER, more than to any other individual, advertising owes its uplift from the mire of dishonesty and disreputableness to its present high plane as an honest and honored profession. He refused to handle any quack advertising, then all the vogue, wouldn't touch whisky advertising, and denied himself a badly-needed commission for the sake of his principles.

Today the new Ayer building, overlooking the historic Washington Square and diagonally across from Independence Square, is one of the notable modern business structures of Philadelphia. The history of the House of Ayer is an inspiration to every ambitious youth anxious to gain success by strictly ethical principles.

RALPH C. CAPLES, president of the Caples Advertising Company of Chicago and New York, tells me that his organization is placing more business this year than ever before. He emphasizes, however, that this is the result of ceaseless businessbuilding. Mr. Caples is particularly proud of the natural color photography advertisements of natural parks now being put out by the Union Pacific.

W. EARLE PASHLEY, of the C. F. Pease Company, Chicago, manufacturers of blue-printing machinery and supplies, writes:

"You may be interested to know that tabulations completed for the first quarter show an increase of 18 per cent in our gross sales over last year, notwithstanding that 1929 sales were the largest in our history. Taking the view that sales of blue-printing machinery and volume of drafting and blue print production are a dependable gauge and forecast of general construction and industrial activity, it seems to us that this showing is unusually significant and tremendously reassuring at this time."

"Sales reports from most parts of the country indicate improved motor markets, with consequent general business gains."

CONSUMPTION of crude rubber by U. S. manufacturers last month increased almost 12 per cent over March.

COPPER SALES have so boomed since the last slash in prices that quotations have advanced.

THE STOCK MARKET is acting rationally. A further period of speculative quiet would be healthy. After that, orderly advance would be helpful. And this is entirely possible, from present indications.

Business Continues to Mark Time

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

BUSINESS IN THIS DISTRICT is still in a waiting attitude. Only minor changes in the situation have taken place during the past month. This is not a time of the year in which expansion usually takes place so that the current hesitant tendency should not give cause for apprehension. Retail and wholesale trade have shown gains in seasonal lines.

General trade for the country as a whole showed improvement in the week ended May 10 when check payments showed a gain of 13 per cent over the previous week and of 1 per cent over last year. This has not been reflected in any tangible change in business activity in this territory.

While the volume in most types of activity is lower than a year ago, this phase of the current dullness is not so pronounced as the weakness in prices. The average of wholesale commodity prices is off 7 per cent from a year ago and steel prices are off 8 per cent.

Employment Gains

EMPLOYMENT HAS IMPROVED in this territory in recent weeks. It seems probable, when the first half of the year has come to a close, that it will be found that total sales and employment were not so far behind normal but that industrial earnings showed the depression to a pronounced extent.

With good summer weather and the increased amount of public work being done, the employment situation should be in fairly good shape for the summer. Most business men are hopeful that the fall will see sufficient progress made in restoring industrial activity to keep a good proportion of labor in jobs when seasonal out-of-door work comes to an end.

Motor Production Higher

AUTOMOBILE PRODUCTION is improving, but the rate of gain has not been up to the earlier expectations of this year. The steel mills have enjoyed increased business from this source. The plate glass makers are also feeling the effects of a higher rate of motor car output. Other types of flat glass are still listless, however. The trade papers in this field offer little hope of any marked revival for some months in their surveys of the situation.

Makers of heavy steel mill equipment are still outstanding among the organizations which are enjoying a high rate of activity. Both United Engineering and Foundry and Mesta Machine are booked for many months ahead.

The railroad car builders are fairly active but they have received little new business recently. Westinghouse Air Brake is busy but its subsidiary organization, Union Switch and Signal, is reducing production to some extent.

Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company is busy in all the departments where heavy electrical machinery is made.

Coal Improved

MOST COAL MINES are working only about three days a week but market conditions have shown a moderate improvement. Stocks of bituminous coal as reported by the Department of Commerce declined from 37,700,000 net tons on February 1 to 33,100,000 tons on April 1. A year ago stocks amounted to 36,900,000 tons.

Demand for lump coal is small as is usual at the close of the domestic season, but there is an active demand for slack and prices have shown improvement. The movement to lakes has been in fairly good volume.

Big Gain Reported In Bond Offering

NEW YORK, May 17.—New bond offerings for the week totaled $190,005,000, compared with $131,496,000 last week and $79,985,000 in the corresponding week last year.

SCHOOL GAINS SUCCESS HERE

Gives Ten-Month Course To Fit Young Women for Careers as Secretaries

Outstanding success has been attained by Grace Martin's School in training young women for the exacting requirements of modern business careers.

The school, located on the eighteenth floor of the Keenan Building, has the advantage of being situated in the heart of the business district. The classrooms are sufficiently removed from the din of the street to afford the necessary quiet for concentrated study.

MATURE STUDENTS

The more mature student, who would not be at ease in a large school, finds contentment and happiness while pursuing her work in this well-appointed school.

The secretarial training course is both an intensive and a thorough one. No subjects are elective. The school is approved for certification by Pennsylvania Department of Public Instruction. The student has a schedule of six hours of supervised work each day. The shorthand drill is the only additional practice work to be accomplished after school hours. The aim of the school is to have our graduates become most valuable in positions of responsibility with the most reputable firms, and with the cooperation of the father, mother or guardian, give the student the benefit of 10 months' training that will be most remunerative.

PREJUDICES ENDED

Mrs. Grace Martin Cornelius, principal of the school, in discussing her work said:

"By her recent years of accomplishment, woman has earned a high and permanent position in the business world. She has destroyed foolish prejudices which formerly existed against her. Opportunity and reward are no longer denied her simply because she is a woman, but only when she is incapable or untrained."

The Grace Martin School admits to its doors only women who have the solid foundation of sterling character and refined tastes on which can be built a store of sound business knowledge.

Choose a building lot from tomorrow's Classified Ads and then go and see the places which interest you. You can see the district to advantage on Sunday.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Irregular — Lone Star Gas Strong

Steel and Westinghouse Sag In Initial Sales; Byers, Atlantic Refining Advance

NEW YORK, May 17.—(AP.)—Price trends were divergent and confusing as the stock market again opened quietly today. United States Steel and Southern Railway lost a point, and Westinghouse Electric, American Tobacco B, Chrysler and Columbia Graphophone were off ¼ to ½. Coca Cola gained a point, Byers and St Louis Southwestern each ¾, and American Can, Kennecott, Atlantic Refining and American Smelting, ¼ to ½.

TRADE CLIMBS TO NORMAL

NEW YORK, May 17.—Although basic industry now faces the season of summer slackness, it is holding up somewhat better than usual, and after several weeks of doldrums and spring fever, business has perked up slightly and resumed its slow and irregular climb back towards normal, says The Business Week in its report covering the week ending May 17.

Steel production is running distinctly above normal despite discouragement due to declining prices, and regretful reminiscenses about the boom last year at this time. Increased trade activity,—more cars loaded, more checks cashed, more money going around,—has jiggled the business barometer this week up to within 3 per cent of normal for the season and the year. It still looks chilly only by contrast with last year, when it read 8 per cent above. The exact reading is 97 per cent, comparing with 94.2 last week and 108 for the same period last year.

If the upward trend in general business should continue at the rate it has shown since the beginning of March, we should be back to normal by October. The stock market has apparently dug itself in, for awhile, determined to wait and do no more discounting of recovery till it can see the whites of its eyes. Commodity prices are still declining, but here and there they seem to be scraping bottom. If retail prices, too, will climb down gently without being pushed, or knocking wages off first, recovery may be a bit faster.

Penick & Ford Calls Half of Preferred

NEW YORK, May 17.—Directors of Penick & Ford, Ltd., have voted to redeem on July 1 8,890 shares of preferred stock, or 50 per cent of the present outstanding issue. Holders of record May 28 will be entitled to have half of their stock redeemed. The company announces a correction of record dates of quarterly dividends declared a few weeks ago. The preferred dividend will be paid to holders of record May 28 instead of June 13 and common to holders of record June 3 instead of June 5.

Higher Prices for Gasoline Predicted

Benefits of the crude oil conservation program continue to be felt as evidenced by the fact that gasoline prices in 50 leading cities are higher today than at the corresponding time last year, according to Hill, Wright & Frew, members of the New York Stock Exchange. One company has announced one-quarter cent increase in tank car gasoline and a general increase in service station prices is expected to follow in the eastern territory.

Last Week's Glass Imports Increased

During the week ended May 10, imports of both plate and window glass into this country registered gains over the preceding week's volume, it is disclosed in the latest unofficial compilations. Incoming shipments of plate glass for the week totaled 148 cases and 114,141 pounds as against 87 cases and 78,370 pounds received the week of May 3. Imports of window glass for the comparative periods were 1,895 boxes and 1,436 boxes, respectively.

Loan on Tank Ships By Shipping Board

WASHINGTON, May 17.—United States Shipping Board has authorized a loan of $6,328,125 to the Motor Tank Ship Corporation of Philadelphia. Loan is to be used in connection with the construction of five tank ships which will be built by the Sun Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., of Chester, Pa. The loan represents three-fourths of the cost of the ships.

Week Sees Increase In Wheat Exports

NEW YORK, May 17.—Bradstreet's estimates exports of grain for the week as follows: Wheat (flour included) 7,813,194 bushels vs. 5,121,310 last week and 6,573,892 in 1929 week; from July 1, 258,472,771 bushels vs. 445,206,882 bushels in same period previous year; corn, 12,500 bushels vs. 12,512 last week and 47,176 in 1929 week; from July 1, 1,180,185 bushels vs. 28,492,044 bushels in similar period a year ago.

FORMATION OF BANK GROUP PLANNED

Institutions to Get Offer Of Stock in Holding Company Proposed Here

Attempts are being made to organize from 60 to 70 banks in Western Pennsylvania into a group to be known as the Western Pennsylvania Bancorporation which will hold a controlling interest in each of the underlying institutions.

The group will have deposits of over $300,000,000 and total resources of over $400,000,000. At least one Pittsburgh bank will be included in the group.

Pomeroy and Salmon, of New York City, have been approaching the banks on the plan. It is understood that August Belmont & Company, of New York, will cooperate on the underwriting of securities.

NO STAFF CHANGES

The identity, personnel and management of each of the banks is to remain unchanged.

The controlling interests will be secured by exchanges of stock of the holding company for that of the individual banks. No par Class A convertible non-voting preferred stock is to be exchanged in proportion to the book value of the banks. Class B voting stock will be exchanged for the good will, based on average earnings of the past four years. It is planned to secure a revolving fund of $15,000,000 for the use of the member banks by the sale of additional Class A stock.

TO SELL SECURITIES

The Western Pennsylvania Bancorporation will form the Western Pennsylvania Securities Corporation with a capital of $5,000,000 to engage in underwriting and to build up security departments in the banks.

The stock of the Bancorporation will be listed on the New York Curb Exchange under present plans.

SPROUL ASKS NEW TRIAL

The Rev. John W. Sproul, 6938 Thomas boulevard, Glory Barn evangelist, is today asking the Criminal Court judges to grant him a new trial following his being found guilty last Wednesday on three misdemeanor indictments in which he was charged with giving three bad checks for $1,000 each, making him liable to a maximum sentence to make restitution for the $3,000, pay a fine of $300 and undergo six years imprisonment.

The motion for the new trial was filed before Visiting Judge William T. Darr, of Jefferson county, who will sit again in this county the week of May 26. It is likely the motion will be argued then before Judge Darr and two local judges.

Sproul put in no defense to the charges, resting his case upon an argument by his attorney C. F. Burkardt that the checks, given to J. M. Vogel, of Millvale, had been post dated, and therefore did not come under the meaning of the bad check law, which says it is a crime to give a check without having money in the bank to meet it.

Guests in Car Hurt, Sue for $25,000

C. H. Frush and his wife, Edna Frush, have brought suit against C. W. Frush, Potomac avenue, Dormont, for $25,000 damages for injuries received when the defendants car upset, while attempting to pass another car, despite the warnings of the plaintiffs. The accident occurred May 18 last, while the plaintiffs and defendant were on their way from Pittsburgh to Ohio. Frush lost part of the small finger of his right hand, which hand was crippled. Mrs. Frush was hurt about the body.

GIRL UNAFRAID

By GLADYS JOHNSON

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Those bitter moments when she crouched in the church and saw Ken married to Cecile were a turning point in Ardeth's life. Not even Ken ever knew of the hours which followed. Perhaps they were vague to Ardeth herself. She was living so intently in the mental that the physical had almost ceased to exist.

Years of misery passed in that single night. And from then on she was changed in some subtle way from the dreamy shy girl she had been. She looked at life with eyes stripped of illusion. But eyes which were unafraid. The gnawing fear which had lurked behind all thoughts of Ken—that vague fear of the future was gone forever. One does not fear when one does not hope.

Something of vividness gone from her beauty. A dimming of the golden radiance of youth. New depths to the hazel eyes. A strange stillness in her gaze, so that one had the impression of gazing into still and very deep water.

Mary Eastwood felt this the next day when she came into the Caprice and walked directly over to Ardeth, who was checking stock in the back of the store.

Ardeth gently drew out of her embrace and turned back to her penciled list.

Cecile Wanted Him

Mary's capable white hands took the girl's face between them and turned it up to her own.

"Ardeth—you know?"

The lovely face worked for a moment.

"Of course," she replied huskily.

Mary's hands dropped and clenched. "Oh, damn!" she got out between her teeth. "Life's so beastly unfair."

The girl drew a long breath. Returned to her checking.

Neither spoke for a moment, then, without looking up, Ardeth said, "This was what you meant . . . about comforting me?"

"Yes," said Mary.

The girl went on, a rush in her words like the echo of a lonely little wind. "I was afraid of it. Always afraid of something. I think I knew that it could never come true. From the very first it didn't seem—real."

Mary spoke bitterly. "Cecile had made up her mind to get him. But it took fate to play into her hands.

Ardeth gulped. "Does she—does she really love him?"

Dines With Tom

"She wasn't blind for all she pretended not to see or care how much he was with you. Don't you see, it was an affront to her. She's vain as the devil. Ken has been publicly labeled hers. That thing in The Spy needled her. She wasn't going to have another girl show her up. And there was something else, too. The Parkers are new-rich, as such things go. That worried Cecile. Ken's family belonged to the old aristocracy. Such things count with Cecile."

There was bitter emphasis to Mary's voice. Cecile's shallowness and affectations had always grated on her. Added to that, she was honestly fond of Ardeth.

Tom came in later in the day, his broad face very sober, his brown gaze turned anxiously on the girl.

"I've come to take you to dinner, Ardeth."

She tried to smile and the gallant effort twisted Tom's heartstrings. "Not tonight, old dear—"

"Yes, tonight," he returned stubbornly. "I dare you to look me in the eye and say you have a date."

The thick lashes swept down. "I'm not good company—"

"Good enough for me!" Tom's voice was gruff. "You don't have to talk if you don't want to. You—shouldn't be alone, Ardeth."

"Alone?" she echoed. Then, sharply, "Alone!"

Tom took her to a small restaurant where they would not run into acquaintances. As they faced each other across the table Tom felt his heart sink. He found himself thinking of a bird with its wings clipped.

"Ah, little kid, don't let it crush you. I knew. I was afraid . . ."

Ken's Mother Dead

The golden eyes swept up to meet his kind gaze and at the suffering he saw there, Tom blinked.

"I was afraid, too" she said steadily. "But I'll never be afraid again. There's nothing in life which can make me afraid now."

Later, Tom was to recall these words and was to learn how true they were.

He found himself speaking vigorously, as though he argued.

"This will pass, dear. Oh, I know that you don't feel now as though it will, but believe me, it will pass. There is much happiness in store for you. Happiness you can't imagine now. I know what I'm talking about, Ardeth, really I do—"

His voice trailed weakly away; she was so still.

He spoke again, scarcely knowing why the words came. "Ken's mother died this morning."

A bitter shiver went through her heart. Her lips moved stiffly. Courteously, "I'm sorry."

But she was not. Tom's words were without meaning. She could not be sorry now. Not even for herself. She was benumbed. All of life had become meaningless and she struggled to keep it so. One should live on the surface of things.

Something she had read long ago came to her mind. "Dig deep in the earth and you come to water. Dig deep into life and you come to tears."

Mad With Sorrow

It was easy enough in the daytime to keep up the pretense to herself. She filled every hour with work. She courted responsibility. Going down to the import houses in search of curios. Interviewing drummers. Trimming window-cases, checking cash. Going to the library for books which would give her the history of these lovely exotic things which found their way to Jeanette's store. She was the first down in the morning, the last to leave at night. The store became her world.

But at night—when she had locked the front door and started her lonely way home—then the mood had its way with her. Little things tortured her, keeping the wound always open—the sight of the flower stand at the corner where Ken had always waited for her. The sound of an auto horn, like the one on Ken's car. The glint of a man's hair in the winter sunshine or the sound of a voice—these could make her heart leap painfully.

All in a moment she would be torn by the hot fingers of jealousy so that she ran up the steep hills in the dark in a mad and childish attempt to out fly her grief.

Nights when she walked aimlessly into the early hours, holding her wet face up to the sky, mad with sorrow. Crucified by her love.

SIX ARRESTED IN DRY RAIDS

Six men were arrested by prohibition agents in as many raids yesterday.

The largest seizure was made, agents said, in a raid on a building in South Third street, where 2,100 pints of home brew were found. John Murphy, alias Jack Meyers, 52, found asleep in the place, was arrested, it was reported.

A 100-gallon still was confiscated in a dwelling in the rear of 219 Fifth avenue, Rankin. The owner is being sought.

Other raids and arrests reported were a confectionery at 224 Eighth street, Braddock, Edward Jones and William McHenry; club at 711 Wood way, Braddock, E. Muir; club at 802 North Homewood avenue, Samuel Salpetro and saloon at 311 Eighth avenue, Homestead, Joe Walton.

PINCHOT HERE, CONFIDENT OF VICTORY

Former Governor to Close Campaign With Theater Rally and Radio Address

Former Gov. Pinchot arrived here today and inferentially predicted he would win the Republican nomination for another term. He said:

"The primary campaign is practically over. I have visited nearly every county in the state and I can say not only accurately but conservatively, that I have never seen in many years of campaigning in every county in Pennsylvania, anything approaching popular interest in an election except when Theodore Roosevelt himself was a candidate.

"I have hardly been in a single town where the meetings were not from two to ten times bigger than the Brown meetings in the same town if he happened to have been there and almost without exception the biggest meeting I have ever seen there.

"If public sentiment means anything there is no question as to what the people of Pennsylvania are going to do next Tuesday."

RALLY IN THEATER

Pinchot will end his campaign here with a radio speech at 7:45 tonight over WJAS and an address at a mass meeting in the Davis Theater, Smithfield street and Oliver avenue.

The doors of the theater will be opened at 7:30 p. m. as there will be no reserved seats, and the meeting will begin at 8. The addresses will be broadcast between 8:35 and 10 p. m. over KQV.

Speakers will include former President of Council James F Malone and Attorney Ralph H Smith, chairman of the local Pinchot committee on meetings and speakers, who will preside.

There will be delegations from many adjacent communities coming in automobile caravans with the Davis Theater as their objective. The speaking will be preceded by a band concert.

M'KEESPORT SPEECH

Pinchot will end his activities in this sector with an address at 10:30 p. m. to the League of Women Voters in the Penn-McKee Hotel, McKeesport.

Malone spoke last night over WJAS, advising that Pinchot will be elected if his supporters go to the polls next Tuesday regardless of weather and vote. He said:

"The organization is up to its old tricks. In the last few days of the campaign they will make every effort to convince not only the members of the organization, but the people generally, of the futility of further opposition. They will broadcast an assumed victory that they have not won nor cannot win."

PORTER BACKS DAVIS, BROWN

WASHINGTON, May 17. — (AP.)—From his bed in the Naval Hospital where he has been confined for three weeks, Representative Stephen G. Porter, chairman of the Pennsylvania congressional delegation, urged the nomination of Secretary of Labor James J. Davis for senator and Francis Shunk Brown for governor.

Porter's indorsement was embodied in a telegram sent Dr. F. H. Frederick, chairman of the North Side (Pittsburgh) Republican Committee.

Both Davis and Brown, Porter said, are men of exceptional ability. Their nomination "mean the dawn of a new era in government in our beloved state," he added.

Levake Supported For Ward Leader

City and county administration leaders are supporting George E. Levake, former alderman of the Sixteenth Ward, according to his friends, in his campaign for Republican leader of the ward.

Their claim is said to be based on the recognition Levake received from the leaders at a recent meeting in the Sixteenth Ward when Levake declared the Davis-Brown slate would carry the ward by a large majority.

VOTING VICTORS IN DOUBT

Concerning the senatorial fight between James J. Davis and Joseph R. Grundy, they think it is a horse race and an even-money bet.

The big question mark appears to be how deeply the anti-dry ticket of Thomas W. Phillips, for governor, and Francis H. Bohlen, for senator, is going to cut into the other two tickets. No one gives them much of a chance for victory, but there is general agreement that the fate of Davis and Francis Shunk Brown and of Pinchot and Grundy depends upon how many votes the anti-dry ticket polls next Tuesday.

The political rail birds of the state capital believe that if the Philadelphia-Bohlen combination cuts deeply it will be fatal to Davis—and Brown, for the liberal votes will come from them rather than from the Grundy and Pinchot candidacies. Both Grundy and Pinchot have declared themselves dry, so the anti-dry votes that go to Phillips and Bohlen won't come from them.

DAVIS MUM ON RUM

Brown has declared for a statewide referendum on the prohibition question, which both modificationists and the drys have denounced as a straddle.

Davis has said nothing on the issue except to a heckler in one of his audiences who was bold enough to ask him straight out what his position was on prohibition. Davis replied:

"I'll bet 10 cents that Joe Grundy paid you to ask me that question."

That was all Davis would say to his questioner.

Thus Pennsylvania, with its nearly 11,000,000 people and its far-flung business activities, has a choice next week between an anti-dry ticket, represented by Phillips and Bohlen; a dry slate, represented by Grundy and Pinchot, and the slate of Davis and Brown, which has taken no positive stand on the question one way or another.

DAVIS HOLDS STRENGTH

There is no formal alliance between Grundy and Pinchot, as is the case with the other candidates. Nevertheless, their respective supporters have found a common enemy in the powerful machines in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, both of which are supporting the Davis-Brown combination.

Until a few weeks ago, Davis and Brown were considered to be easy winners. But that there has been a turn is apparent on all sides, although Davis has suffered less than Brown.

"Uncle Joe" is a redoubtable antagonist, and he knows his Pennsylvania. He has not been providing the financial sinews in Keystone politics all these years for nothing.

And Gifford Pinchot has been campaigning this state brilliantly and effectively. He won one governorship eight years ago, and it would not be surprising if he wins another Tuesday.

A good deal admittedly hinges upon whether William S. Vare can deliver the vote of Philadelphia County with his old-time efficiency. Four years ago Vare won only two counties, his own, Philadelphia, and Dauphin, but he was nominated by 80,000.

From one end of the state to the other, the air is filled with rumors of "trades" and "deals." One can hear that Davis will be traded off for votes for Brown, the governorship being considered more important to the organization leaders than the senatorship.

This is denied by the Philadelphia organization.

The counties of Philadelphia and Allegheny, containing Philadelphia city and Pittsburgh, account roughly for nearly one-half the total vote of the state. The city organizations, the Vare machine in Philadelphia and the Armstrong-Kline machine in Pittsburgh, are lined up for the Davis-Brown slate.

Future Bright for Art Here, Says Critic

Museums are the sacred sepulchres of art, according to Dr. Christian Brinton, at a conference in Kaufmann's yesterday on the relation of the Boardman Robinson mural paintings to contemporary art.

Penelope Redd

Dr. Brinton, who is an internationally famous critic responsible for the introduction of many foreign painters to the United States, was hopeful for the future of American art. He said:

"We are witnessing the beginning of a national style in painting such as the world has not seen before.

"Boardman Robinson's art is of today. It is cast in the mode of our new, austere, and anti-sentimental view of art; yet it allies itself both with the old and modern through Robinson's highly developed plastic sense.

"I think it is a rather sad commentary on the Carnegie Institute that the officials should have asked Alexander to epitomize Pittsburgh. What they needed was a Robinson.

Pittsburgh always inspires me. The city itself is the raw material for art. Its magnificence, somberness, and virility, creates the sense of reality essential to great art."

In refutation of Edgar Kaufmann's friendly accusation that Dr. Brinton had been more concerned with the encouragement of European than American art, the critic replied:

"When I returned to the United States at the conclusion of my European studies, about 1893, there was nothing in painting or any other of the arts that was convincingly native. In life and in literature, we were Americans; but in the other arts what was not Beaux Arts was bizarre.

"Since 1925, a change has come about. Modern science and modern industry have brought back the idea that a functional quality is requisite to any art expression. The Boardman Robinson mural paintings perfectly fulfill this purpose."

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

PITTSBURGH'S ONLY description of the Kentucky Derby will be broadcast at 6:30 o'clock tonight by WJAS. Ted Husing will be at the microphone.

Several other unusual features will be offered. Topping the list is a minstrel show for Admiral Richard Byrd and his crew to be given at 11:20 o'clock by the Braddock Male Chorus of 60 voices.

John Boles in "Captain of the Guard," WCAE at 8:30, will be good entertainment. Likewise the spelling bee between women of the press and gentlemen of the press at Washington, a KDKA broadcast at 9 a. m.

The Miniature Theater on KDKA at 10:30 has created a considerable audience. Tonight's production will be "Two Crooks and a Lady."

GRUNDY LEADER RAKES BOSSES

Nicholas A. Phelan, a former battalion chief in the fire bureau and member of Fire Fighters' Local Union No. 1, who is supporting Senator Joseph R. Grundy, has announced that he issued a call to all labor union men to protest against coercion of public employes in the interest of candidates for office.

He issued the following statement yesterday from Grundy headquarters in the Pittsburgher Hotel:

"After Mayor Kline and Commissioner Armstrong on May 5, at the Watt Street School, threatened the city and county employes with loss of their jobs if they failed to support the Davis-Brown ticket, I wired President Green, of the American Federation of Labor, suggesting that he assign a representative to make an investigation."

After an exchange of communications, Phelan said, President Green suggested to him that as a member of the fire fighters' union, he have the local union adopt a resolution of protest and present it to the central body for adoption. Phelan declared:

"To my mind the surest and swiftest way to show your disapproval of these two czars and put a stop to it for all time is to defeat the ticket Armstrong and Kline espouse."

Former Gov. John K. Tener yesterday raised questions regarding inuendoes contained in James J. Davis' speech in Pottstown Thursday night. Tener gave out the following statement at Grundy campaign headquarters:

"Mr. Davis in his defensive speech said, as he is quoted in the newspapers, 'I never made money by laying off men, 50 or more at a time, to keep down the expense of the company. I have been working all my life for the people.'

"So far as I know Davis never risked any money of his own in employing people usefully."

Telephone Company Extends Its Cables

William Bradford, division manager of the Bell Telephone Company, has announced that construction is now under way on approximately 3,500 feet of aerial telephone cable in several recently opened streets in the area served by the Lehigh central office. The work is costing more than $3,000 and will be completed by September. Construction will begin soon on additions to the existing aerial cable network in other sections served by the same office.

OFFICIALS TALK FOR DAVIS

Attorney Hermann F. Ruoff will broadcast over WJAS at 8:30 p. m. today a speech in behalf of candidates on the Davis-Brown ticket.

City and county officials will address a meeting tonight of the Fourteenth Ward Republican organization in the headquarters of Max J. Spann, candidate for the Legislature, at 5808 Forbes street.

Scheduled speakers are Mayor Kline, County Commissioner Armstrong, Councilmen Herron and Alderdice, City Treasurer Schooley, Congressman Harry Estep, County Controller Woodside, Spann and Attorneys Jacob Shulgold and Benjamin Lencher.

Davis and Brown supporters filled St. John's Lyceum, formerly South Side Turner Hall, to the doors last night and radio amplifiers carried the speakers' messages to throngs on the sidewalks.

Edward Townsend, chairman of the Twentieth Ward, presided at a Davis-Brown meeting last night in St. James' Hall, West End.

T. F. Robertson, acting president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, said he was there to answer a statement by Mr. Fox, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, that no reputable labor leader was against Gifford Pinchot. He said:

"I don't know what his international president will say about that statement, because 23 of the railroad unions have indorsed Davis and Brown; the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor has indorsed Davis and Brown, and practically every legitimate union in this state has indorsed Davis and Brown."

Controller Woodside broadcast last night over station WJAS a speech in support of the Davis-Brown slate.

ANTI-DRY PLEA BY CHURCH

Col. Samuel Harden Church, president of Carnegie Institute, will broadcast at 6:30 today over KDKA a speech in support of Thomas W. Phillips, Francis H. Bohlen and Charles Dorrance, running on an anti-dry ticket for governor, United States senator and lieutenant governor, respectively.

Col. Church is a member of the Allegheny County campaign committee for the Phillips-Bohlen-Dorrance ticket.

William Frew, county chairman of the anti-dry candidates, explained yesterday that the committee is making every effort to prevent frauds at the primary on Tuesday.

HIGHLIGHTS IN HISTORY OF CLASSIC

WHETHER EARL SANDE makes good the popular dope and guides Gallant Fox to victory, or that favorite horse suffers the fate of many another first-choice of the past and goes down to defeat, the fifty-sixth running of the Kentucky derby at Churchill Downs this afternoon is certain to add another colorful chapter to the history of America's outstanding turf classic. It is a history that is featured by numerous interesting highlights as you glance back over its long stretch.

Earl Sande.

The derby, run first in 1875, was originally over a distance of a mile and a half. This continued until 1895, inclusive. Since 1896 the route has been a mile and a quarter. The first winner was Aristides. When the distance was reduced in 1896, the initial race was won by Ben Brush, ridden by the famous Negro jockey, Willie Simms, in a great finish with Ben Eder. Ben Brush was the sire of Broomstick. The latter's son, Meridian, won the derby in 1911, and his grandson, Whiskery, was the winner in 1927. The fastest time ever made in the event was 2:02 2-5, set by Old Rosebud in 1914.

ONLY ONCE has the derby been won by a filly. That was in 1915, when victory went to H. P. Whitney's Regret. The only horse ever to win both the Preakness and derby, the second part of which contract Gallant Fox undertakes today, was Sir Barton in 1915. He also won the Belmont takes as a third achievement. The only jockey ever to ride three derby winners was Isaac Murphy, the Negro star of the old days. Murphy rode Buchanan in 1884, Riley in 1890 and Kingman in 1891.

Only Murphy and Winkfield, the latter riding His Eminence in 1901 and Alan-a-Dale in 1902 ever piloted winners in two successive years. Sande rode Zev in 1923 and Flying Ebony in 1925 and can equal Murphy's record of three victories by finishing first this afternoon. Other jockeys to bring home two winners were Johnny Loftus, on George Smith in 1916 and Sir Barton in 1919; Albert Johnson, on Morvich in 1922 and Bubbling Over in 1926, and Pony McAtee, on Whiskery in 1927 and Clyde Van Dusen last year.

NO OWNER HAS ever won the big number three times, and only E. R. Bradley with Behave Yourself and Bubbling Over, and H. P. Whitney with Regret and Whiskery, have won it twice. It costs fully $1,000 to send a horse to the post—$25 entrance fee, $500 starting fee, with transportation, jockey fees and other expenses making up the balance.

E. R. Bradley.

To the entrance and starting fees the Jockey Club adds $20,000, so that the value of the stake today will be around $55,000. The richest derby was won by Mrs. John D. Hertz's Reigh Count in 1928, paying $55,375.

THE LONGEST-PRICED derby winner was Donerail in 1913. He paid $184.90 for a $2 pari-mutuel ticket, or 91 to 1. His share of the stakes that year was only $5,475. In 1903, Stonestreet paid 60 to 1. The only imported horse ever to win the race was Omar Khayyam in 1917. The late John E. Madden led the winning breeders with Old Rosebud, Zev, Flying Ebony and Sir Barton, all foaled at his Hamburg Place. Pari-mutuel betting was legalized in Kentucky in 1908. More than 100 machines are in operation at the track annually on derby day, handling wagers of $2, $5, $10, $25, $50 and larger sums.*

ONE OF BASEBALL'S spring puzzles centers around the wide difference between the batting figures of the National and American Leagues. The American has produced the season's biggest one-game slugging spree, that in which Cleveland made 25 runs and 25 hits against the world's champion A's, but when the averages were last compiled five National League clubs were hitting above .300 against only one in the American. The National had 19 men above .400 against the American's seven, and 57 players above .300 against the American's 38.

What's the answer? Nobody appears to know. Many National League partisans see in the statistics evidence of batting superiority on the part of the older loop. On the other hand, American League adherents contend the lower hitting marks in their favorite loop prove there is a better grade of pitching in the Barnard circuit.

BUT VERDICTS OF that kind often are based only upon the way the fan happens to be pulling. It's the same in any single game you might pick out in any city. If the home club pounds the ball all over the premises, it is great hitting power. If the visiting team does the tall hitting, it's weak pitching by the home hurlers.

E. S. Barnhard.

If the home hitters are held to a few runs and hits, they are adjudged to be in a batting slump. But if it's the visitors whose offense fails to click, their weak hitting is attributed to fine pitching by the home slabmen. Seemingly, it all depends upon the point of view

ONE OF THE first conclusions at which National Leaguers jumped when the difference between the hitting and scoring records of the two leagues became noticeable was that the American was using a less lively ball. President E. S. Barnard, however, assures that this is not the case. He says that, as has been the custom for a number of years, the baseballs used in the National and American Leagues, though bearing the names of different sport goods' firms, are

GALLANT FOX FAVORED IN CLASSIC

LOUISVILLE, May 17.—(AP.)—High tariff or low, big navy or small, wet or dry—today is Derby Day.

Times may have changed, more exciting scenes may have ushered in previous Kentucky classics of the turf, higher fevers of wagering may have been manifest in more prosperous times, but today at least the thoroughbred once again was king in the bluegrass region, and Louisville, as of old, seethed with the turbulent spirit, the thrill and hubbub of the most spectacular of American horse races.

EARL PRESENT

It takes more than the weightly affairs of Wall Street and Washington to keep them away. And so today found the captains of industry, the steermen of state and the Earl of Derby himself, here from England for the first time, mingling with the proverbial beauty and chivalry of the old South, the "boys" from the big cities of East and West, and the hard-boots from ol' Kaintuck.

As derbies have come and gone, this one has furnished a comparatively calm and peaceful prelude to the excitement that even hard times and a small field could not diminish, as today brought in the final rush and postling jam of turf followers. Taxi drivers and even hotel-keepers, selling lodging at $20 a day, have complained that business is not up to the level of former years. At the Downs, the $2 mutuel "iron-men" have been getting the play from bettors who formerly marched up prosperously to the $50 winders.

Fewer special trains have brought their throngs of the faithful. Many familiar faces are missing. Even the Earl of Derby has been indisposed for two days, unable to fulfill many of his engagements because of a severe cold, but his lordship, fully expected to watch his first American Derby and present the famous trophy to the proud owner of the victorious throughbred.

COLLETT FAILS IN TITLE BID

FORMBY, Eng., May 17.—(AP.)—Miss Diana Fishwick, a girl in her teens, yesterday defeated Miss Glenna Collett, American champion, four up and three to play, to win the British women's golf championship the first time she tried.

Miss Collett lost to Miss Fishwick at the thirty-third hole after the clever American had fought her way through six rounds and defeated three of the greatest players on this side of the Atlantic.

Putting lost the day for the visiting titleholder, although many of her other shots were not all they should have been. Miss Collett played as though she was very tired, which she should have been after opposing the English champion, Miss Molly Gourlay, for 21 holes, and nosing out Miss Enid Wilson and Hilda Cameron on the eighteenth green.

The American girls left last night for Gleneagles to play two courses there today and tomorrow. They will go to St. Andrew for Monday and Tuesday, after which they will move on to France for a team match with the French. They will sail for home on the Mauretania May 31.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE SINGING RIVER OF PASCAGOULA, MISS. The phenomenon of the Singing River of Pascagoula has come under the observation of thousands, but no adequate explanation of it has been made. Poular legend and folklore have assigned many poetical reasons for this delightful natural curiosity. As in the case of the Vocal Statue of Memnon, or the Barking Sands of Hawaii, the cause probably is a combination of natural and atmospheric conditions. SERGEANT JOHN L. CLEM, THE YOUNGEST SOLDIER OF THE CIVIL WAR—John L. Clem was the youngest volunteer in the Civil War, in which he took an active part, having volunteered at the age of 12. YANKS RETAIN WALKER CUP

SANDWICH, England, May 17.—(AP.)—With 10 matches won and only two lost, Walker Cup honors yesterday went to the United States for the sixth time. With a ceremonial dinner in old Guild Hall at Sandwich last night Bobby Jones, captain of the American team, was given again the International golfing trophy which Britons never have won.

Jones' men gave Roger Wethered's team the most decisive defeat a British team ever received in this country. The largest crowds ever to see Walker Cup matches in England watched the contests.

In singles matches yesterday, the British were able to win only one, T. A. Torronce drubbing Francis Quimet, seven up and six to play. As the Americans won three of the four foursomes, the final score was 10 to 2. Two years ago, at the Chicago Golf Club, the Americans won 11 to 1, Torrance, then as now, winning the only singles match for the British.

Results of the day's plays:

Harrison R. Johnston, St. Paul, defeated Cyril J. H. Tolley, five up and four to play.

Robert T. Jones, Jr., Atlanta, defeated Roger Wethered, nine and eight.

George Von Elm, Detroit, defeated Rex Hartley, three and two.

George Voigt, New York, defeated Sir Ernest Holderness, ten and eight.

O. F. Willing, Portland, Ore., defeated John Nelson Smith, two and one.

T. A. Torrance, London, defeated Francis Ouimet, Boston, seven and six.

Donald K. Moe, Portland, Ore., defeated J. A. Stout, one up.

Ronald Mackenzie, Wilmington, Del., defeated William Campbell, six and five.

Big Six Stars, Idle or Busy Fail to Gain

Associated Press.

The upper half of the Big Six remained idle yesterday, O'Doul and Waner because of rain at Pittsburgh, while the second division, including the three American Leaguers, lost ground in the batting race, although their order did not change. Sam Rice, still the American League leader, and Al Simmons opposed each other in a doubleheader and Rice got a bit the best of the argument. He made three hits in the two games to two by Simmons. Rice's mark dropped to .405 and the Philadelphian's to .350. Babe Ruth had but two times at bat but he could not hit and his average slipped 10 points to .373. The standings:

	G.	AB.	R.	H.	Pct.
O'Doul, Phillies	21	82	21	32	.433
Stephenson, Cubs	19	69	9	22	.449

U. S. CUP TEAM TOPS CANUCKS

PHILADELPHIA, May 17.—(AP.)—In the brief space of two hours, the United States Davis Cup tennis team chalked up three straight victories over Canada's best players and won its way into the second round of American zone competition.

Johnny Van Ryn took less than half a minute to complete the job he began Thursday and beat Dr. Jack Wright, of Montreal, the Canadian captain, by total scores of 6-2, 6-2, 3-6, 6-2.

George Lott, of Chicago, next came through with a 6-2, 6-2, 8-6 decision over Marcel Rainville, agile little French-Canadian from Montreal.

It remained for America's dashing young doubles team—blond Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., and the dark-haired East Orange, N. J., boy, Van Ryn—to score the crowning triumph and clinch the series.

THE LOWDOWN ON THE BUCS

By THE BENCHWARMER.

Well, folks, we was all yellin' for a rest and we got a dandy, so I hope we get together with the Reds this afternoon. I'm just about dizzy from playing cards in the clubhouse instead of being out there keepin' in good shape for the exhibition games Jule promised to put me in.

I met a pretty fair pitcher while we was takin' a workout yesterday. His name is Grover Cleveland Alexander. I guess when he was good he could spot you two or three balls on every batter and then win. I gotta big kick outa him, especially after he came over where Jule was dissectin' one of them "rabbit balls."

Aleck watched Jule cut off the cover and both of them was surprised to beat the band when they saw the way the yarn was wrapped. Jule kept pulling off strands of yarn that was wrapped so tight the ball couldn't help bein' lively. Aleck just smiled and he started to laugh when Jule got down to the first rubber ball. There's one rubber ball inside of another and then there's a cork inside the little ball.

"Sure it's the ball that's spoilin' things," said Alexander. "Them birds that are hittin' it clear out to the library are not so much stronger than Wagner and those other stars of 20 years ago, are they? Why, in those days you could count on the hand the balls that went over the leftfield fence. I threw a slow ball up to Bob Meusel in Cincy. Bob had to furnish all his own power on it and he hit it over the centerfield fence. Sure the ball's too lively. Some of these days a batter will hit one back through the box and when they get the pitcher to the hospital they'll find that they won't have to cut out his appendix and a lot of other stuff. They'll all be knocked out."

I just stood there with my

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Idle for three days, except for a brisk workout yesterday, the Pirate hosts will make a strong attempt to swing into battle this afternoon, with the Reds offering the opposition.

The Quakers departed last night after a four-day visit in Pittsburgh that afforded them just one fight, which they won. The rest period was relished by the Pirates, but Manager Ens is satisfied that further postponements might not be so good.

Capt. Pie Traynor is expected back today from Baltimore whence he journeyed to have his ailing left eye examined and treated. The reports on Traynor are very favorable.

SANKEY ARRIVES

Shortstop Ben Sankey, of Wichita, arrived in Pittsburgh this morning and will be in the Pirate dugout this afternoon ready for any emergency. Ben answered Skipper Ens' call of distress when Stuart Clarke and George Grantham sustained injuries. Clarke will not be able to play for more than a week, but Grantham will try to remain in the game. Ens was without a utility infielder after Grantham's misfortune occurred.

The Reds were hitting along on all cylinders till the fast-going Robins fluttered into Cincinnati and proceeded to smear the home team. The defeat of the Rhinelanders yesterday send them into sixth place, but the Pirates will have to cop today's contest to stay in front of their guests.

Remy Kremer, who has been holding the slab assignment since Wednesday, still has possession of the slip and will face the Howleymen. Manager Dan is expected to counter with Bennie Frey, his latest slab star.

P. WANER BACK

Paul Waner will be back in the game for the Pirates, his presence in the lineup bringing about a slight change in the battlefront. Grantham will drop to the fifth position to make room for the star outfielder in the third notch. Engle will stay at the top of the order.

Forbes Field was so damp yesterday the Pirate management decided at the eleventh hour to cancel the last game with the Phillies. It will be played here as part of a double-header on Thursday, June 26. The three postponed games have been moved back to provide double attractions.

The afternoon was not a total loss to the Pirates and Quakers. The two clubs were going through their preliminary drills when the home officials made their decision. The athletes remained on the field until almost 4 o'clock. Skipper Ens sent his slumping pitchers through a drill of fly-chasing. Ens thinks the extra work will help to put an edge on his hurlers although the staffs of every club in the National League are having considerable trouble on account of the lively ball.

The Buccos and Reds will depart tonight for Cincinnati where tomorrow they will open a three-game series. The Ensmen will return Wednesday to take on the Cubs.

Nick Altrock Says:

PHILADELPHIA, May 17.—The Cardinals traded Lefty Mitchell to the Giants because McGraw thinks all he needs now is a pitcher. Well thats all Mrs. O'Leary needed to put out the Chicago fire. I see Art Shires made a speech here in Philadelphia yesterday and suffocated the audience with his modesty. Shires said he was only an ordinary player but publicity built him up. Folks, don't you believe that. If publicity could make you a big leaguer Henry Ford would be playing second base for Detroit. Late this month Rogers Hornsby gets $1,000 for being the most valuable player in the league. I bet Hornsby would rather have a new rubber heel.

W. P. I. A. L., BIG FOUR TRACK MEETS TODAY

SCHOOL SQUADS COMPETE IN STADIUM

By JESS CARVER

The annual W. P. I. A. L. championships, featured in the airy domain of the Pitt Stadium today, heads the track and field program for Pittsburgh. With a score and 10 teams competing, the high school stars will essay to dethrone Westinghouse, winner of the 1929 meet, from its kingly pedestal.

While the high schoolers are competing in the Stadium, the varsity squads of Carnegie Tech and Pitt are in Morgantown for the annual Big Four carnival, along with West Virginia, defending champions, and Wash-Jeff, which had yet to get out of the circuit cellar. At Schenley Oval, in a dual engagement, a pair of Tri-State Conference teams, Duquesne and Bethany, lend a bit of collegiate action to the local scheme.

RECORDS SEEM SAFE

So good are the existing W. P. I. A. L. track and field marks, and so ordinary the performers on this spring's squads, that it is highly improbable that many records will go boop, boop ah dooping from the boards today. Bradley, Connellsville High's crack hurdler, will assault both the high and low timber marks; Bob Pusch, of Beaver, will go after the record in the pole vault and Mitter Markovich, of Harding High (Aliquippa) is to attempt a new distance in the shot put.

Westinghouse won last year's meet by a two and one half point margin, and, no stronger this year than last, appears to have but slight chance to repeat his '29 triumph. Connellsville and Ellwood City are regarded as having splendid chances of taking up the league togs.

At Morgantown, the doughty Mountaineers set out to defend the Big Four title they have held for the past two years, a defense that apparently is destined to meet with success.

PITT HOPE SLIGHT

Pitt, it will be admitted, possesses the sole chance of ending West Virginia's reign, and this chance is so slight as to be almost hopeless.

Capt. R. F. (Pete) Bowen, Ed Knoblock and Everett Utterback, the big three of the Pitt squad, are certain to land at least five first places, possibly more, and certainly will garner the major share of the individual points.

West Virginia's better balanced squad, led by Waggoner, Hill, Ruble, Goldstein, Riley and Brandt, should retain the title, and by a margin greater than it established to win a year ago.

Carnegie Tech, stronger than in years past, is certain to take third place, with Wash-Jeff booked to trail far in the rear.

BETHANY FAVORED

Bethany's Green Bisons, victors by a wholesome majority over Wash-Jeff in the only dual meet in which the West Virginians have taken part, figure to take the Dukes today at the Oval. Duquesne has been trounced both by Westminster and Geneva in dual engagements to date, and Bethany ranks almost on a par with the United Presbyterians and Covenanters.

Today's meet is the first intercollegiate track and field affair the Dukes have taken part in locally for many years.

The Tipoff

Brad Stephens, diminutive guard on Duquesne's basketball teams for the past three years, will captain the Blufftop next season. Brad was elected yesterday when Tinny Benedict withdrew from the running, breaking up a tie vote that had existed for the captaincy.

High school squads of the Northwestern district of the W. P. I. A. L. clash in a championship meet at Sharon today. Bill Vukmirer, Grove City's crack dash man, competes in this division and will run today.

Dick Frech, Beaver, in the pole vault.

Markovich, Harding High, in the shot.

Pete Bowen will run in his last Big Four meet today, and he'll try to make it his best. The Panther captain will go after victories in the 100, 220 and 440 and will try to place in the shot and javelin.

The annual spring confab of the W. P. I. A. L. will be held at the University club this morning, prior to the start of the league track meet.

The meeting originally was scheduled for the Pitt Faculty Club, but was shifted yesterday. A meeting of the decisions committee will precede the regular gathering.

Sande and Gallant Fox, Derby Favorites Today :-: —By Hal Coffman

than 15, and possibly no more than 12, may actually go to the post this afternoon when the bugle sounds, around 5:15 o'clock (Central standard time), for the fifth race of the program.

From the outset of derby speculation, the field has been so dominated by Earl Sande and Gallant Fox as to make the pre-race dope monotonous. In fact, the prospects in favor of the eastern colt, enhanced yesterday by the drawing of an ideal position in the middle of the field—No. 7—have been such that horsemen have adopted the attitude they are "too good to be true."

When the signs all read one way, the veterans wag their heads and look for an upset. For Kentucklans, perhaps, the hope was father to the thought. They have backed Edward F. Prichard's big chestnut colt, Tannery, as the horse to beat Gallant Fox, but today they also turned to the chances of either Gallant Knight or Buckeye Poet, one of the E. R. Bradley pair, to repulse the eastern invasion of the Bluegrass.

GALLANT FOX UNBEATEN

If Sande and Gallant Fox win, it will be the third triumph in seven years for the Jockey, equaling the Derby riding record, and the first time since 1919 that a thoroughbred has captured the rich Preakness, Pimlico classic, as well as the Derby. Gallant Fox won the Preakness a week ago yesterday, with Sande up, and entered the race today unbeaten as a three-year-old.

The double starters, especially if conditions are unfavorable, included Busy, Dick O'Hara and Alcibiades, the only filly in the list.

In the City League, Pleasant Valley and J. L. Thomas battled to a 3-3 tie at Dean Field, the Smilers scoring a brace of runs in the seventh inning to gain a deadlock. O'Neill had three safe hits for Pleasant Valley.

HORNES DEFEATED

Reliance Life defeated Joseph Hornes, 9 to 2, in one C. & I League contest and in another Carnegie Steel and B. & O. played a scoreless tie.

St. Phillips nosed out the Presbyterians in the Crafton-Ingram Church League, 2 to 1, in a well played game. The Hoffmans defeated Mt. Lebanon, 3 to 2, in the Major League, and in the Greater Pittsburgh circuit, in one of the feature contests of the day, the Homestead Aces scored a 2-to-1 victory over the Homestead Jenkins.

On the independent program, the Homestead Grays turned back the Kiski Valley All-Stars, 16 to 0; Crawfords defeated Book Shoe, 12 to 4; St. Clair Frogs defeated Excelsior, 3 to 2; Eastwood downed the Thompson Club, 7-4, and the Brown Stars nosed out the North Side Civics, 6 to 5.

FAIRHOPE VICTOR

Badock held Dunlevy to three safe hits as Fairhope hammered out a 7 to 0 victory in the Monongahela Valley League.

The D. J. Brodericks won another as they turned back the Adam Club, 10 to 5. Rodgers, hurling for the Brodericks, fanned a dozen enemy batsmen.

JAPS VICTORS.

LONDON, May 17.—(AP.)—Japan won its way into the third round of the Davis cup play yesterday, winning the doubles match against India after taking the first two singles matches Thursday. T. Abe and T. Herada defeated H. A. Sont and J. Charanjive 8-7, 4-6, 6-2, 6-2, 6-2.

W. VA. SCHOOL MARKS FALL

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., May 17.—(AP.)—Two state high school records tumbled here yesterday before the onslaught of 179 athletes from 39 high schools in the preliminary round of the West Virginia high school track and field championships at Mountaineer Field. Today the semi-finals and finals of the schoolboy meet will be held as an added attraction to the Big Four championships.

Fred Ashburn, Masontown, cracked the tape in the half mile in the record time of 2:04 4-5 seconds, clipping one full second off the former best time. He was extended to the limit by Burgess, Oakhill.

Lykins, Huntington, tossed the javelin 167 feet, 7 inches, to better, by 3 feet, 7 inches, the mark of Bruhn, Wheeling, made in 1929.

Although Charleston High, the defending champion, qualified 10 men to lead the qualifiers, Oak Hill was firmy established as the dark horse of the meet with eight qualifiers, the same number reaching the semi-finals from Parkersburg and Huntington.

SHUTOUTS MARK WOMEN'S PLAY

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

The Women's Golf Association of the Western Pennsylvania team league matches got away to a real start at the Pittsburgh Field Club yesterday when the Pittsburgh Field Club swamped Shannopin, 9 to 0; Oakmont shut out Chartiers Heights, 8 to 0; Edgewood defeated Fox Chapel, 5 to 2, and Allegheny blanked Stanton Heights, 8 to 0. For the first time the contests in Section 1 were played in foursomes, and this style of competition proved a big success.

Kiski's golf team made a grand comeback when it nosed out the Alcoma Country Club team, 14 to 12, in their annual team match at the Alcoma Country Club. Last year Alcoma set down the Kiski linksmen. The feature of the competition saw W. S. (Billy) Marks, captain of the Kiski team and a promising candidate to succeed his former school-mate, Denny St. Clair, as West Penn junior champion, this year, defeat Dr. W. H. K. McDiarmid, Alcoma Country Club champion. Marks scored a 73 to Dr. McDiarmid's 75.

Shady Side Teams Meet Nichols Today

Two Shady Side Academy athletic teams compete against the Nichols School in Buffalo today. The local baseball nine has lost to Nichols the last two seasons, but can gain permanent possession of the Mitchell trophy by winning today.

mouth open listenin' to Aleck. He sure is a wonder. Why, he says he was pitching they would often start and finish a game with three balls. But they didn't throw them out because they got scuffed a little on the stands. Aleck said they would roll around the roof for awhile and they'd get the ball and put it in play again. In them days I guess a homer was a homer. Aleck says the bats ain't got anything to do with it. The ball is too lively and there's too many new ones thrown in for no reason at all.

How about comin' out today and givin' the boys a lift? We need it, and we're gonna get goin'.

Kiski Track Team Downs Tech Plebes

Simms, of Kiski, was the star of the meet, winning the low hurdles, high and broad jump and placing second in the high hurdles.

Featured by Stewart Studnicki's no-hit, no-run pitching feat as Schenley defeated Vocational and Peabody's victory over Turtle Creek in the opening game of the W. P. I. A. L. championship eliminations, the scholastic baseball campaign got in a full day's work yesterday.

Schenley continued on its undefeated prowl in the City League, beating Vocational 9-0. Studnicki fanned 13 Vocational batsmen, and did not allow a hit or a run.

In a Section II encounter, Carrick routed Langley, 17 to 4, hammering out 16 safe hits. Hahn held Langley to seven.

In W. P. I. A. L. sectional clashes, Crafton was defeated by Mt. Lebanon, 10 to 9 in a surprise game, the defeat erasing Crafton from the title chase and giving McKees Rocks the flag in Section III. In Section IV, Aliquippa clinched the banner by defeating Stowe, 9 to 2.

Peabody, representing the City League in the W. P. I. A. L., rallied in the seventh inning to beat out Turtle Creek, Mercer's double, delivered as a pinch hitter, paving the way for the winning run. The scores:

WESTERN CLUBS GAIN EDGE IN NATIONAL

SENATORS DOWN MACKS TWICE; TAKE LEAD

Associated Press.

Just as the East had the edge in the first intersectional play of the American League, the West held the upper hand in the opening East-West series of the National League, which came to its rather damp close yesterday. With only the Brooklyn Robins upholding the honor of the Atlantic seaboard, the West won 22 of the 49 intersectional games against 22 eastern victories and placed three teams in the first four in the standing for the series.

Brooklyn captured first place through its 10 to 3 triumph over the Cincinnati Reds yesterday as Dazzy Vance pitched another of his fine games while the Brooklyn sluggers pounded out 16 hits and scored eight runs in the first three innings. This victory enabled Brooklyn to boast two clean sweeps, two games against Cincinnati and four against St. Louis. The Robins also won three out of four games with Pittsburgh, losing only the Chicago series. The final result was nine victories and four defeats.

REDS PLACE THIRD

Chicago and St. Louis, which opened the National League's second all-western series yesterday with the Cardinals' ninth successive victory, each won eight games and lost four to tie for second place. Cincinnati brought up in third place with eight victories and five defeats. The New York Giants led the second division in the intersectional standing with seven victories and six defeats, with Boston, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia bringing up far in the rear.

Playing in their home territory again yesterday, the teams of both leagues started out to put on a set of real struggles. The National League game between the Cardinals and the Chicago Cubs was perhaps the best thrill producer, ending with a ninth-inning St. Louis rally which brought a 9-to-8 victory. After a lot of hitting and several changes in the lead, the Cards smashed through with four runs in the final inning to win. St. Louis led the heavy hitting with 21 blows.

The Boston Red Sox put on a lesser ninth inning rally to win the closest American League game by a 5 to 4 count from the New York Yankees. The Red Sox needed but one run to win after Bill Dickey's pinch home run had tied the score in the first half of the ninth and they made it.

SENATORS TAKE LEAD

Washington's Senators, with Bump Hadley and Ad Liska dividing the pitching burden in a brilliant fashion, scored easily in both halves of a double-header to take first place in the American League away from the Philadelphia Athletics. Hadley pitched steadily while the Senators hit freely to win the first contest, 5 to 3.

In the second game, Liska held the world's champions to three hits in a close duel with George Earnshaw, winning out by a 4 to 0 count when Joe Judge cracked out a home run with two on base in the eighth inning.

The big leagues got a better break from the weather yesterday, although it was bad enough to hold the attendance down considerably. Of the five games on the brief schedule, only one, the final clash between the Phillies and Pittsburgh, was called off.

TENNIS LEAGUE SCHEDULE SET FOR RACE

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

The Pittsburgh Tennis Association schedule committee has released for publication its 1930 P. T. A. Inter-Club League card. The bi-divisional slate calls for start of action a week from today, May 24, with 18 squads answering the bell. Eight aggregations—Edgewood, P. A. A., Stanton Heights, University Club, College Hill, South Hills, Westinghouse and Mount Lebanon—will cavort in Section I, while the remaining 10, Edgewood Seconds, Westinghouse Seconds, College Avenue, Minnetonka, Alpha Kappa Psi, Duquesne Library, Philadelphia Company, Canonsburg, Washington Heights and West Penn Power, will seek laurels in Section II.

Section I outfits will compete in seven tussles apiece, their program winding up on August 2. Section II entrants are booked for nine contests each and will close on August 9. The upper group will loaf Memorial Day week-end, and both divisions will be idle two Saturdays during the Western Pennsylvania championships in mid-June, as well as over the Fourth of July.

Mt. Lebanon is the lone newcomer to Section I. Six delegations, however, will stage their Section II debuts—Edgewood Seconds, Alpha Kappa Psi, Duquesne Library, Canonsburg, Washington Heights and West Penn Power.

CARD RATIFIED

The schedule was ratified at a noonday committee conclave yesterday. At the same gathering, Capt. Sam Keller, of Duquesne Library, made formal application for sanction of revival of the old Allegheny County championships, the competition to be held at Duquesne, Pa. The affair had already been approved by general P. T. A. session, and formal approbation by the schedule group was immediately forthcoming.

The event will be run off either over Labor Day or late in August, the exact dates being contingent upon the decision of College Hill in the matter of restoring the Beaver County titular tourney to the Labor Day bill.

Dr. Billy McElroy's Pitt netmen entrained last evening for West Point where this afternoon they will encounter Millard Lewis and his Cadet followers. Carnegie Tech will wind up its Eastern trip by invading College Park for a fracas with University of Maryland.

DUKE MATCH OFF

The Duke-Westminster debate, down for today at New Wilmington, has been postponed because of a wash-out on the Blue and White courts the past few rainy days. Meanwhile at the Stadium, Billy O'Loughlin will lead the Pitt Freshmen contingent into return battle with Wash-Jeff yearlings. The Tartan Plebes round out the day's party by treking to Youngstown for a go with the strong Rayen High School array there.

The P. T. A. Inter-Club League schedule:

JOHNSTOWN, JAYS, SCOTS, GUYS WIN

After two days of partial inaction, due to inclement weather, the Middle Atlantic League played out its full string yesterday, with triumphs resulting for Johnstown, Jeannette, Charleroi and Scottdale.

In a weird game at Charleroi, the champion Governors defeated Clarksburg, 20 to 8, in seven and one-half innings. The Guys garnered their score of runs on 16 safe hits, five of which were home runs.

The Wheeling Stogies were defeated by Jeannette, 10 to 8, at Jeannette, the game being called on account of darkness at the end of the eighth inning.

Thomas walloped a home run in the eleventh inning to bring Johnstown a 6-to-5 victory over Fairmont at Fairmont. The blow was the big shot of a four-run rally.

U. S. Tennis Stars Sail for Europe

BOSTON, May 17.—(AP.)—The main body of the American Wightman Cup tennis forces, which will defend this historic trophy against the English women's team at Wimbledon next June, sailed for England last night on the Scythia. The departing players were Sarah Palfrey, of Brookline; Edith Cross, of San Francisco, and Mary Greef, of Kansas City. They will join Mrs. Helen Wills Moody and Helen Jacobs, the other members of the American team, in England.

Among the other tennis notables sailing were Louis B. Dailey, of New York, president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, who is going abroad to observe the Wightman Cup matches and get acquainted with European tennis officials; Mianne Palfrey, Sara's oldest sister, who will play in the British championships, and Mr. and Mrs. John Palfrey, parents of the promising young Brookline player.

Chicago Court Rule Kills Dog Racing

CHICAGO, May 17.—(AP.)—Dog racing within the Chicago area was dealt an almost certain knockout blow yesterday.

The Appelate Court handed down a decision, dissolving the permanent injunction protesting the Hawthorne and Thornton tracks and holding pari-mutuel or any other type of betting, involving money, was illegal.

State's attorney John Swanson announced he and his aides would attend the Hawthorne track, where the dog races are promoted by Al Capone, and stop them if betting is carried on.

The decision was the second blow to the sport within a week here. Several days ago, the court refused an injunction to promoters at the White City and Chicago stadium, who sought protection against interference by the state's attorney's office.

Grande Tumbles Out of Ring, Loses

CAMDEN, N. J., May 17.—(AP.)—Frankie Genaro, recognized by the N. B. A., as flyweight champion of the world, won on a technical knockout last night over Frisco Grande, Philippines, in the fourth round of a scheduled 10-round bout. Genaro weighed 116½; Grande 113. The champion's title was not at stake.

Near the end of the round both fighters went over the ropes and referee Gene Romaine attempted to pull Grande back into the ring. As he did the Filipino injured his back and could not continue.

DANES, CZECHS SPLIT.

PRAGUE, May 17.—(AP.)—Denmark and Czechoslovakia yesterday broke even in the first two singles matches of the second round of the Davis cup play. Elmer Ulrich, veteran Denmark star, defeated Jan Kozeluh, brother of Karl the professional, 6-4, 6-2, 7-5, 3-6, 7-5 while Boesel, of Czechoslovakia, won from Borm, of Denmark, 6-2, 6-2, 4-6.

White Sox Barely Able to Muster Full Team

CHICAGO, May 17.—(AP.)—Chicago's White Sox, who left on their eastern trip up among the leaders in the American League, today faced the Cleveland Indians in a doubleheader with barely enough talent to play one game.

Tommy Thomas, right-handed pitcher; Art Shires, and Bud Clancy, first basemen, and Moe Berg, catcher, were numbered among the cripples, with none likely to be available for duty for another week.

Ted Lyons was Manager Donie Bush's choice to start the first contest and said the pitcher who "hollered the loudest" would get the other assignment.

AUSTRIA LEADS.

OSLO, Norway, May 17.—(AP.)—Austria went into the lead in the second round Davis cup play yesterday defeating Norway in the first two singles matches. The winner meets Italy in the third round of the European zone.

WOLGAST STOPS LA MORTE

NEW YORK, May 17.—(AP.)—Midget Wolgast, of Philadelphia, flyweight champion of the world in the eyes of the New York State Athletic Commission, won on a technical knockout from Willie La Morte, of Newark, in the fifth round of a scheduled 15-round title fight last night. Stricken by a heart attack at the end of the fifth round, La Morte collapsed and, unconscious, was carried from the ring.

La Morte was taken to his dressing room and soon recovered. The commission physician said he had suffered a heart spasm, probably from a punch under the heart just before the fifth round ended.

MAXIE GRANTED RING LICENSE

NEW YORK, May 17.—(AP.)—Max Schmeling's difficulties with the New York State Athletic Commission faded away yesterday, leaving the German youngster free to concentrate on his preparations for a 15-round heavyweight championship match with Jack Sharkey in the Yankee Stadium June 12.

In receipt of word from Schmeling's training camp at Endicott, N. Y., that an agreement had been reached between the boxer and representatives of Madison Square Garden relative to a match in 1931, the commission granted Max a boxing license. This necessary formality had been held up pending Schmeling's agreement to box for the garden within a year if h. should win the title from Sharkey.

Schmeling signed contracts today at Endicott for the match with Sharkey under the direction of the milk and also signed a provisional contract for 1931. With Schmeling signed, the ticket sale will start today.

Long's Sport Comment

made in the same factory and by the same process, and are exactly alike except in the lettering on the covers and in the colors of the stitching.

AN AMERICAN LEAGUE contention that the difference is due to smaller parks in the National does not hold up either. There are small and large fields in both leagues, and the greater number of large ones are to be found in the National, where Boston, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh present real ball parks against only Chicago and New York in the American.

Besides, how about the St. Louis situation if the parks are to be brought into the discussion? The Cardinals and Browns use the same field, yet the Cards in the latest compilation were hitting .315 and the Browns only .234. Probably a difference in pitching is the explanation of the league differences, but probably that's only a spring condition. Eventually the National League pitching will improve, in all likelihood, and things will come close to being even up.

THOUGH THE DEFEAT of Glenna Collett at the hands of Diana Fishwick, 19-year-old English school girl, was more than offset in international golfing weight by the sixth straight triumph of the American Walker Cup team, the news of the American girl's reverse was received in her home country with an unusual degree of regret.

The women's British championship is the only major title over there that American golfers never have succeeded in winning, but there appeared to be a fine prospect that Miss Collett would come through this time after advancing as far as the finals, particularly as Joyce Wethered, England's greatest woman golfer, was not a competitor this year. Naturally, the adverse outcome was disappointing to Americans, but at that Miss Collett put up a praiseworthy fight, and Miss Fishwick must be given all due credit for a clean-cut and decisive victory and for having proved too good for America's best.

George Voigt.

THIS YEAR'S SUCCESSFUL defense of the Walker Cup by Capt. Bobby Jones and his seven American amateur mates was the most impressive and convincing in all the list of Yankee team triumphs in international golf. This for the reason that the matches were played at Sandwich, the hardest course in the world for a stranger, and where the weather conditions and other items are conceded to give a distinct advantage to native golfers accustomed to them. Even in this country many golf authorities had confessed that they would see little chance for the American team to escape defeat, but the answer of Jones and his fellow players was to rise to their greatest heights in the face of the severe handicap and to sweep through to a most decisive victory by the overwhelming score of 10 matches to 2. And two of the players, George Voigt and Don Moe, had never played in an international team match.*

AMERICAN PLAYERS MAY be beaten out by foreign stars in individual tournaments occasionally, but international team matches are the real test of a country's golf class as a whole, and Walker Cup results leave no doubt that Uncle Sam has a greater number of high-class golfers than his chief rival.

In the six Walker Cup meetings since 1922, American teams have won 51 matches against only 21 for the British. In the last two meetings the British have been routed by a total count of 21 matches to three, their only wins coming in one foursome and in singles play against Chick Evans and Francis Ouimet.

Treaty Fetters Merchant Ships of U. S., Naval Expert Declares

By CAPT. NELSON H. GOSS
United States Navy.

(United States Naval Academy, 1905, commanded destroyers and convoy escorts in European war zone during World War, graduate Naval War College, now commanding the U. S. S. Sirius. Capt. Goss is a practical sea-going officer, who has devoted much study to the subject of sea power, and is a well-known writer on naval subjects).

The London Treaty does not consider merchant vessels in any way except to confirm the general understanding of what guns they are able to carry.

But merchant vessels are a very definite element of naval strength.

Great Britain has not only incomparably the greatest merchant marine in the world, twice greater than ours, but she is superior to us in the type of merchant ships most useful as auxiliary cruisers and transports—vessels over 4,000 tons with speed of 15 knots or greater—in the ratio of 4-1. She has 27 large steamers, over 20,000 tons gross, to our six.

From this it is apparent that we cannot possibly hope to equal her merchant marine strength for many years, and never unless our present rate of building is multiplied many times.

This situation is important for us because unless some allowance is made for our weakness in merchant vessels the definite limits placed on our regular men-of-war in this treaty will condemn us to permanent inferiority at sea.

Can Carry Guns

A sizeable merchant vessel, as the war showed, can carry as large as 6-inch guns without any extensive alterations to her structure or any considerable loss of cargo space. Larger guns, however, involve reinforced supports underneath, the installation of power hoists and such consideration for the stowage and handling of ammunition that they cannot be mounted on merchant vessels, except possibly a very few of the very largest, without extensive alterations in the vessels' structure and material loss of efficiency for their normal duties.

Auxiliary cruisers performed very favorably during the war on blockade duties. Some of them served as ocean escorts to convoys of regular merchant vessels. The Germans employed them very successfully as commerce destroyers, and the value of such vessels as auxiliary cruisers was shown by the British in running down and destroying some of these German raiders by armed merchantmen.

All merchant vessels are naturally vulnerable, being entirely unprotected. Many of them have limited radius as well, so they are dependent on shore bases for refit and supplies.

The most valuable size of merchant vessel for service as an auxiliary cruiser is the medium-sized cargo and passenger ship of fair speed, not below 15 knots. Great Britain has 245 such vessels to our 83.

Japan Prepared

Japan has 26 of these also and a sizeable merchant marine, of the class of ships more useful for war purposes when we consider her sheltered position, with 141 combination passenger and freight vessels to our 166, of which the British have 470. Both Great Britain and Japan are also well and fortunately equipped in the matter of bases at desirable locations.

A considerable part of the merchant marine tonnage we have consists of smaller coastwise vessels which are not useful for war purposes while much of our ocean-going tonnage is composed of oil tankers and slow cargo vessels, valuable for their designed use, but of limited value in war except for regular fuel and supply purposes.

Our bases are not only few in proportion to those of the British and Japanese but the experience of our shipping interests since the war has indicated that it is not easy for our ships to obtain port services in someone else's port.

The need and general desirability of a greater merchant marine on our part is quite apparent, but the natural economic question of how profitable it is under present conditions in comparison with foreign shipping which enjoys superior port facilities and more favored conditions of operation as to cost, has not been conducive to a great development of our own merchant marine. So it appears probable that our merchant marine will continue relatively weak in ocean-going tonnage of fair speed and adaptability for conversion to war purposes for much time to come.

Ignored by Treaty

It is recognized that this merchant marine is not a matter that is convenient or perhaps practicable to cover or to compensate for by treaty. It is not a matter of simply removing a present restriction such as controls the base situation.

While no great matter of surprise that the London Treaty only refers to merchant shipping by defining the size and number of guns they may carry, in reality only confirming the natural limitations of such vessels. It is nevertheless necessary to remember the part of a merchant plays in the general question of naval strength and that were all the other elements, all types of ships and bases, exactly equal or in some definite ratio like the 5-5-3, predominance at sea would then go to the power having the greatest merchant marine, which is why the subject needs to be considered in arriving at a decision on this London treaty which definitely limits our strength and reduces our relative strength in other directions.

NOTICE is hereby given that Ordinance, copy of which is published herewith, was introduced in the Council of the City of Pittsburgh on April 28, 1930, pursuant to the provisions of the several Acts of Assembly, authorizing said City, without any petition of property owners, to open, widen, straighten, extend, vacate, grade, pave, curb, macadamize and otherwise improve streets and alleys or parts thereof, within its limits, viz:

BILL NO. 842.
AN ORDINANCE—Widening Rochkarn road at the intersection with Brighton road in the Twenty-seventh Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, and providing that the costs, damages and expenses occasioned thereby be assessed against and collected from properties benefited thereby.
SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same, that Rochkarn road in the Twenty-seventh Ward of the City of Pittsburgh be widened to a uniform width of 50 feet, as laid out in the following described property to-wit:
Beginning at the intersection of the southerly line of Brighton road with the southerly line of the projection Vilas Place of Lots to record in the Recorder's Office of Allegheny County in Deed Book Vol. 30, page 182; thence extending along said southerly line of the line of Brighton Villa Plan of Lots south 75 deg. 20 min. 30 sec. west 1.82 feet to a point on the easterly line of Rochkarn road; thence extending along said easterly line of Rochkarn road produced south 25 deg. 25 min. 10 sec. west 1.61 feet to a point on the northerly line of Brighton road; thence extending in a northwesterly direction along said northerly line of Brighton road and the arc of a circle having a radius of 1.50 feet and a central angle of 6 deg. 56 min. 30 sec., 2.06 feet to the place of beginning.
SECTION 2. The Department of Public Works is hereby authorized and directed to cause said Rochkarn road at the point of intersection with Brighton road to be widened in conformity with the provisions of Section 1 of this Ordinance.
SECTION 3. The costs, damages and expenses occasioned thereby and the benefits to pay the same shall be assessed against and collected from properties benefited thereby in accordance with the provisions of the Acts of Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania relating thereto and regulating the same.
SECTION 4. That any Ordinance or part of Ordinance, conflicting with the provisions of this Ordinance, be and the same is hereby repealed, so far as the same affects this Ordinance.

NOTICE is hereby given that Ordinance, copy of which is published herewith, was introduced in the Council of the City of Pittsburgh on May 5, 1930, pursuant to the provisions of the several Acts of Assembly, authorizing said City, without any petition of property owners, to open, widen, straighten, extend, vacate, grade, pave, curb, macadamize and otherwise improve streets and alleys or parts thereof, within its limits, viz:

BILL NO. 874.
AN ORDINANCE, opening Hampton street in the 11th Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, from Farragut street to Sheridan street, re-establishing the grade thereof and providing that the costs, damages and expenses occasioned thereby be assessed against and collected from properties benefited thereby.
SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same, That Hampton street in the 11th Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, from Farragut street to Sheridan street, be and the same is hereby opened to a uniform width of 50 feet in conformity with the street (formerly Stewart street) as laid out in the East Liberty Plan of Streets approved by Councils, August 27, 1870.
SECTION 2. The grade of the southerly curb line shall be and the same is hereby re-established as follows, to-wit:
Beginning at the easterly curb line of Farragut street at an elevation of 311.55 feet (curb as set); thence rising at the rate of 5.0% for a distance of 12.32 feet to a point of curve to an elevation of 311.97 feet; thence by a concave parabolic curve for a distance of 20 feet to a point of tangent to an elevation of 312.97 feet; thence rising at the rate of 2.85% for a distance of 332.71 feet; thence by a convex parabolic curve for a distance of 40 feet to a point of curve to an elevation of 322.46 feet; thence rising at the rate of 3.25% for a distance of 349.71 feet; thence by a convex parabolic curve for a distance of 50 feet to the westerly curb line of Sheridan street to an elevation of 341.40 feet (curb as set).
SECTION 3. The Department of Public Works is hereby authorized and directed to cause said Hampton street in the 11th Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, to be opened in conformity with the provisions of Section 1 of this Ordinance.
SECTION 4. The costs, damages and expenses occasioned thereby and the benefits to pay the same shall be assessed against and collected from properties benefited thereby in accordance with the provisions of the Acts of Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania relating thereto and regulating the same.
SECTION 5. That any Ordinance or part of Ordinance, conflicting with the provisions of this Ordinance, be and the same is hereby repealed, so far as the same affects this Ordinance.

NOTICE is hereby given that Ordinance, copy of which is published herewith, was introduced in the Council of the City of Pittsburgh on May 5, 1930, pursuant to the provisions of the several Acts of Assembly, authorizing said City, without any petition of property owners, to open, widen, straighten, extend, vacate, grade, pave, curb, macadamize and otherwise improve streets and alleys or parts thereof, within its limits, viz:

DAILY TRUE STORY

Fair Play

"Who was he, Helen?"

J. Mortimer Truxton asked the question of his daughter across the breakfast table.

"His name is Dwight. He has something to do with radio."

"Does he peddle them or put up aerials?"

Helen Truxton flushed just a little.

"Mr. J. Mortimer Truxton, who prides himself on his fair play, hints by broad innuendo that a man he has seen but once and knows nothing about is a business flop," Helen said.

She pushed away the remnant of grapefruit, touched the floor buzzer and awaited the bacon and eggs as she smiled at her father.

It was his turn to redden.

"Not quite fair, Helen. The fact is, he looked too much like one of those collar advertisements—a man like that doesn't very often run to a normal supply of brains."

"Dave Dwight, it so happens, is a sort of radio engineer; he designs things, he arranges international hook-ups and invents little—er——"

"Gadgets?"

"I don't know. Maj. Young told me that he gets royalties on something or other that goes into most of the better grade radios. The fact remains that he can dance divinely."

"His type would, and pet?"

"I imagine he could arise to the occasion. I like him."

"I don't—not yet."

"I'll have him over, father."

"Not on my account, my dear."

"I prefer to."

Mr. Truxton pushed aside his plate and glanced more keenly at his daughter.

They had been a fairly happy father and child for years. J. Mortimer Truxton was a business man, in the big way of being head of a big manufacturing concern. He had always prided himself on his slogan for home life and business, "Fair Play."

Promise to Be Sane

He also believed that home affairs should be discussed much as business affairs were—everything thoroughly weighed.

For six years he had been a widower. During those six years his daughter had been growing into charming girlhood. J. Mortimer always faced problems squarely. And discussed them with his daughter.

"You'll be thinking of marriage pretty soon," he had said. That had been a year ago.

"I've been thinking of it ever since I can remember."

"In a serious way, I mean. I dislike to think of it, but I hope I am not selfish. I know that when the right man comes it will be natural for you to marry, Helen."

"Why not?"

"Quite so, only I want you to promise to be sane and business-like about it. Don't let your heart run away with your head. A woman will take days to decide on a dress, months to decide on the make of a car and perhaps a year or so before she can decide on the type of house she wants for a home, but she will see some young man once and think she is sure she wants him."

Helen had promised to talk it over with him whenever she found herself interested in any young man.

There had been Doctor Abbott. He had paid marked attention to Helen. Mr. Truxton thought he was a wonderful chap and had said to his daughter, "There's a man who has my hearty approval. He will make you a splendid husband."

"No, he won't, because I won't marry him."

"Oh—that's different," Truxton had observed.

Then Willie Burnham, with all the Burnham millions at his disposal, had been rushing Helen around. J. Mortimer didn't approve of him. He talked it over with Helen.

"He's rather nice," Helen said.

They discussed it at length. Helen took her father's advice [illegible] waited a while. She found out that Willie wasn't the sort of a chap she could love and respect.

J. Mortimer Truxton was pleased and somewhat proud about this.

Too Good Looking

"You see, I believe in fair play, my dear," he had said, "and I have proven to you that my judgment is sound. If you had married that fellow it would have been another marital flop, as your crowd puts it."

Thus thing went along.

Mr. Truxton had dropped in at Maj. Young's reception and had seen his daughter with this Dwight chap. He noted that the young man was almost too good looking to be up to his own standards. Hence his questions next morning.

"Yes, I'm having Dave over to dinner tomorrow night," Helen assured her father.

"Don't tell me this is going to be serious," Truxton said.

"It might be—I like him awfully well. I met him a couple times some months ago and he went down in the Argentine on some radio stunt. I met him at Polly's dance last week and last night he was awfully attentive."

"Trot him along, my dear Helen, but I tell you now that I'm not keen for him, for his type. You know that my judgment has always been right in such matters."

"But if I love him——"

"You won't permit yourself to do that until I have investigated. You know we started out on the basis of plain discussion of candidates for your hand, my dear, and fair play in everything."

"Yes, father," Helen said.

But she was depressed. Here, for the first time, she had really fallen in love, and she hoped (and expected) to make Mr. Dave Dwight fall in love with her, and now her father didn't approve of Dave all because he was really a handsome young man.

Dave Dwight came over to dinner.

His manners were perfect. He talked entertainingly. But when it came to his radio work he said very little. This made Truxton suspicious.

Truxton could see that Helen was unusually happy with this chap. He was afraid she would fall in love.

Maj. Young and his widowed sister, Mrs. King, dropped in. Truxton had asked them and Helen hadn't known.

They played bridge. Dwight and Helen, Mr. Truxton and Stella King. The Major had left, to come back in a short time. Dwight played well. He overbid Truxton, was doubled, redoubled and won easily. Truxton seemed terribly embarrassed at this, and Helen was worried.

Father's Objections

Next morning Truxton said, "I was right. I'm not keen about this Dwight chap, he's too cocksure of everything, too secretive. I believe in open discussion of things. I wasn't afraid to tell him about my business and our plans, but he never said a word about his affairs."

"What is he working on? Some new doo-dads for the radio that will make them cost more?"

"I didn't ask him."

Helen said no more. She was out with Dave a great deal. Now and then she ran across her father and the Widow King. Mrs. King was jolly and nice, good company for her father, and Helen, with a start, wondered if her father was thinking of marrying again.

After a few more weeks she decided that her father was going to marry Mrs. King, although he had said no word and given no hint.

Helen was out with Dave and some friends and it was dawn when he left her at home. Truxton heard her come in and noted the time. At breakfast he was quite grave.

"You're not letting yourself fall in love with that doll-faced Dwight chap, are you, my dear?" he asked, suddenly.

Helen turned red, sipped some coffee and faced her father.

"I'm very much in love with him. I am going to marry him," she said.

"Nonsense; I don't approve. You know my judgment has always been right."

"He's the man for me. He's head of the research department for the biggest radio concern, and, above everything else, he loves me and wants to marry me. He is going to come to you about it this morning."

"My dear daughter, don't be hasty or angry. We always discuss things; we believe in fair play. You'll realize that I am right—"

There was a telephone call. The servant called Helen. A feminine voice said, "My dear Mortimer, how can I thank you for the orchids—and that beautiful bracelet?"

Helen said, "Oh, Mrs. King, the maid made a mistake and called me. I'll send father."

When Truxton returned to finish his breakfast Helen stared at him.

Fair Play Again

"How many diamonds in the bracelet, father? From the tone of Mrs. King's voice there must have been a couple of quarts."

Truxton turned red with anger.

"I don't like that sort of talk, Helen," he said, sharply, "because Mrs. King has done me the honor to promise to be my wife."

"That's too bad—really!"

"Sorry to disappoint her, but you see I don't approve of her—she's not your type—you'd never be happy. I know women as well as you know men."

"What are you talking about, Helen? Mrs. King is one of the best women——"

"No doubt, only I do not approve."

"You sit there and tell your father that you do not approve?"

"Certainly. I know you, J. Mortimer Truxton, father of mine. I know your reputation for fair play. I know the type you are—square as a die—and since you maintain that it is right for you to select my husband, then you must admit, in the name of your beloved Fair Play, that it is equally right for me to select your wife. I do not approve of her any more than you approve of Dave Dwight—so it is all settled; there will be no wedding bells for either of us. I shall drop in on Mrs. King and explain that there will be no marriage with you——"

"Helen!"

"Yes, father."

"You—you wouldn't go to Mrs. King and say—tell her—"

"Wouldn't I, though?"

"But—but what would you say?"

"That would depend on what you say to Dave when he calls to ask about me. He'll be here at nine—there's the bell now. Go along and tell him the sad news," said Helen. "I'll sit right here."

Truxon went out. He was gone one and a quarter minutes by Helen's wrist watch and then he came back with Dwight, his arm across Dwight's shoulder.

"A young man who hopes to interest you in an engagement ring my dear," said "Fair-Play" Truxton.

Dear Friend Ella—
You are the only one I can turn to in my trouble the only one I dare trust. You and I were on the stage together long ago and you were one of my bridesmaids when I married a millionaire's son, Lance Cole, whose father is a big broker. The father didn't want his son to marry a chorus girl and when my baby was born he tried to split Lance and myself apart and assume the baby guardianship. I ran away, drove through the night with the baby in front of me. I went into a tenement flat looking for a woman I had known when I was poor. She had moved. I went to sleep in the hallway and I knew little Diana would be safe with you. Please watch her tenderly until I can make other arrangements and don't let anyone take her away from you. I'll get in touch with you again as soon as possible.
Your unfortunate friend,

Dear Aunt Bella—
How does a spider spin his web? —Curious.

Ans.—So you'd like to know, would you? And you thought Auntway Ellabay oodenkay answerlay. Well, at the apex of the abdomen of a spider are four or six spinnerets. These spinnerets spin a glutinous substance which subsequently dries. In other words, and in other spiders, a transverse surface in front of the spinnerets is known as the cribellum correlated with which is the metatarus called the calamaistrum. New, Curious, you don't know no more than you did when you got fresh, do you? It takes brains to understand nature. At least that's been my experience."

Rackets and Raids

Pennington Proves That Protected Joints Aren't Safe After All.

How is a Pittsburgh racketeer to regard those that furnish him "protection," if a prohibition administrator can come along and raid his place without warning? The "Show Boat" incident will not help the graft, that's sure.

*What were the police and district attorney's of-*fice doing while the river-boat gambling house was operating, openly and fearlessly? Waiting for "complaints," perhaps.

Anyone not wearing a black mustache and an officer's badge was welcome in the river gambling joint, it appears. How was this racket "protected" for so long?

*When the present city administration was con-*tinued in power, it was pretty evident that the gambling houses, slot machines and other rackets were to be continued, too. After all, citizens of Pittsburgh are responsible.

*Choice between a professional lobbyist and a sec-*retary of labor whose life is marked by humanitarianism, for the U. S. Senate, will be made in Pennsylvania Tuesday. The choice should not be hard.

Two of the biggest questions before the Senate are prohibition and foreign entangling alliances. Grundy and Davis have said very little about one and remained silent about the other.

Blue law repeal interests Pennsylvania as much as any other question. It seems strange that neither Pinchot nor Brown has discussed it.

Pinchot's record of rugged honesty and fearless fighting should put him in the governor's chair. Then, at least, we may be sure he will try his best to reform the coal and iron police and the Public Service Commission.

The "wet" candidates in Pennsylvania have been conducting an energetic and effective campaign. They don't have a chance of success, but here's a prediction they poll a big vote in Pittsburgh.

Where does Senator Reed stand in this election, by the way? The people are choosing his colleague. They certainly would be interested in knowing what he thinks about it.

City Council seems determined to install a totally inadequate traffic plan for the new Pennsylvania depot. By the time "Plan T," with a traffic circle at grade, cars and taxis coming into and running through one spot from all sides, is completed, everyone will wonder how such stupidity came to be adopted.

Motor car congestion is a big problem that grows more complicated daily. All the expert opinion in Pittsburgh, without exception, favors "Plan Z," with its series of traffic lanes and grade separation. Eventually that plan will be adopted and makeshifts discarded.

Pittsburgh's business men should be excited over the railroads' attempted increase in short-haul freight rates. This scheme is a distinct menace to local industry.

*The blue laws are decidedly unpopular in Pitts-*burgh, according to the Sun-Telegraph poll. Very few voters want them modified. They are voting, eight to one, to REPEAL this antiquated statute.

*Nothing would be of more material help to Pitts-*burgh than a liberalization of Sunday. This city and Philadelphia are positively shunned by week-end travelers. The injustice of permitting only the rich to play golf and enjoy movies on Sunday accounts for the overwhelming sentiment against the blue laws.

Mine Blast Toll Small, Avella Is Fortunate

A spark from a car switch, Marsh gas set free by a fall of slate. These are believed to have been the cause of an explosion in the Powhatan mine, Avella, Pa., resulting in the death of three miners and the injury of four others.

It was a "lucky" accident. Seventy men working with the others escaped injury. It might have snuffed out the lives of all the 350 men in the entire workings had conditions been different.

That the loss of life was small perhaps can be attributed to safety measures. Rock-dusting, a means of preventing colliery explosions, is said to be frequent in the mine, in which there had not been a blast in 18 years.

Mingled with the sympathy for those who lost their lives will be a note of thankfulness that the hand of death has not gone into hundreds of homes. Mine explosions seldom take small toll.

Gladstone Knew

He Understood Nations.

It may interest British statesmen, and American statesmen, too, to read an extract from a letter that Gladstone wrote in 1869, 61 years ago, concerning treaties and agreements among nations:

"England should not foreclose and narrow her ... liberty of choice by declarations made to other ... in their real or supposed interests, of which ... uld claim to be at least POINT IN-ERS . . ."

LAST words are the important ones here.

... get tied up in agreements with the British, French ... we know what interpreters THEY would be of their ...eements later.

...ring the big war we lent them ten billions of dollars and ...terpretation of our modest request that they repay part ...oney was expressed in one word, "Shylock."

Crippled Tar Needs Care -:-

Drawn by Nelson Harding

Here's a case that needs attention,
It's a crippled sailorman,
Otherwise the U. S. Navy,
Help him, Senate, all you can.

It was at the London parley
That he suffered injury,
And he needs more careful treatment,
Not to mention sympathy.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Home Sweet Home

The Eighteenth Amendment was intended to protect the American home. Its instigators started to design a beautiful pattern and wound up cutting paper dolls.

"Bugs" Baer

Home used to be a retreat from the cares and worries of the world. A place where a man could go and forget that he voted the straight Republican ticket.

You may have stopped at the corner saloon to take a nip with the boys. But once you were inside your own domicile you were in a cloistered nook. And you were also in for the night.

You got out your carpet slippers and pipe and read about the starving Chinese or the sea-serpent off Atlantic City. There was no liquor in your home except for medicinal purposes. And it was marked plainly so that you could take it by mistake in the dark.

What is the average home now? It's a filling station for guests. The first thing your host shows you is his bar, which used to be the spare guest room. Now they spare nobody.

The Eighteenth Amendment has violated the sanctity of the home. The afternoon tea is a series of bottled earthquakes and bathtub gin that is strong enough to eat the copper roof off the state jail.

When you arrive home the wife still has a perfumed hangover from the afternoon bridge party. When you sit down to dinner the butler staggers in and pulls up a chair.

All the guests start dinner with an apertif, which is a French word meaning appetizer, and gives you an appetite for another apertif.

Then comes some Scotch that has been aged in the wood longer than an owl's feathers and tastes about the same.

The third course is a quarrel between a lady guest and the host. The lady slams the host over the head with a very fine bowl of cracked ice and says, "You must visit us some time."

Everybody gets sick, but you don't have to worry about what to do until the doctor arrives, because the police get there first.

Einstein's Constructive Genius

By Archibald Henderson

Albert Einstein has built up a strong and complex structure, which presents extraordinary novelties and weird features. But we are only just now beginning to realize that this is a sound and enduring structure, solidly built upon the foundations of the past.

Einstein has organized our physics into a coherent structure and united gravitation and acceleration, physics and electromagnetism in one grand, unitary scheme. Einstein is not a rebel, a revolutionary, an iconoclast. He has, in fact, related together and subsummed in one relevant system Maxwell's field theory of electricity and Newton's universal law of gravitation, itself generalized and rephrased as a field theory. He has shown the inter-relationships of mechanics and physics, electricity and electromagnetism.

It may be that a wider generalization than Einstein's, simpler in structure, but including both Newton's and Einstein's theories as special cases, will arise in the future. But until that time arrives—for it is an inevitable future contingency of the first likelihood—we must accept Einstein's conclusions, with all their complexities, peculiarities and apparent impossibilities.

One of the most astounding of tour de forces in the history of science is Einstein's triumph in devising laws of nature, and a scheme for expressing them, which would be independent of the framework or axes to which they are referred. By means of a curious form of calculation, known as tensorial calculus, and the use of reference measures, called Gaussian co-ordinates, Einstein was able to formulate the law of physics, independently of any particular reference.

The clue to all this may be found in his brilliant surmise that acceleration and gravitation are interchangeable forces, so far as our mathematical equations are concerned. Indeed, except for one striking difference, acceleration and gravitation act almost exactly alike.

Imagine a large horizontal disk capable of carrying an observer, such as may be seen in amusement parks. Let the disk be covered by a large dome-shaped lid, so that the observer within cannot tell by direct observation whether or not the disk is in motion. Suppose the disk is at first stationary. The observer, in walking from one point to another in his little world, would perceive no difference between one point and any other.

But let the disk be set in rotation, and though the observer could not directly perceive the motion, he would become aware of a difference. At every point of his space except the exact center he would experience a force repelling him radially outward, and the greater the distance from the center, the greater the force of repulsion.

He would, in fact, be living in a sort of turned-inside-out gravitational field.

This "force" of repulsion is, however, purely inertial in its nature. As such, it does not originate at the center of rotation, but in the observer himself, and consequently no screen erected between him and the center can diminish the force he feels.

Here we have an illustration of how a motion of a system may give rise to something simulating a gravitational field which disappears when the motion of the system stops.

Einstein made the brilliant observation that a gravitational field, so far as its effects are concerned, is equivalent to an inertial field. In this fertile assumption lies the germ of generalized relativity.

∴ LISTEN, WORLD ∴

By Elsie Robinson

This is a prophylactic age. We make a tremendous fuss about anything which may soil or sicken our bodies. We scrub and sterilize and disinfect and avoid contagion. Yet our health and happiness are much more dependent on our minds than on our bodies. And we rarely think of safeguarding our minds against that most vicious infection—the infection of inferiority.

Trashy humans are much more dangerous than the most toxic germ. Vulgarity, laziness, dishonesty and all shoddy standards are far more contagious than smallpox or scarlet fever.

You pick your drinking cup with care. You should use a thousand times more care in picking "a friend or even a casual associate, for if there's a taint in that character you will inevitably absorb it.

Nations as well as individuals have been ruined by the contamination of inferiority. You have heard how Rome crumbled? Foreign enemies didn't wreck Rome. She wrecked herself. Dr. C. G. Jung tells how in his "Contributions to Analytical Psychology."

"At the beginning of our era, three-fifths of the Italian population consisted of slaves; that is, of marketable human objects without rights. Every Roman was surrounded by slaves. The slave and his psychology flooded ancient Italy and every Roman became inwardly, and of course unwittingly, a slave. Because living constantly in the atmosphere of slaves, he became infected through the unconscious with their psychology. No one can shield himself from such an influence.

"The European, thoughtless of the spiritual heritage that belongs to him, cannot live unpunished among the Negroes in Africa—because unnoticed, their psychology gets into him and unconsciously he becomes a Negro. There is no fighting against it. There is in Africa a well-known technical expression describing this condition, namely, 'Going black.'"

"No one can shield himself from such an influence," says Dr. Jung, and, unfortunately, few of us want to shield ourselves. There's a secret weakness that makes us like to have inferiors around. It's hard work keeping up with your superiors, but you can always get a hand from your inferiors. This pleases both our laziness and our conceit. And we can always console ourselves by saying that they're awful—roughnecks—of—course—but—they—can't possibly—hurt—us—because—we're — so—different.

But we don't stay different long. "Play with pitch and you'll be defiled," runs the old saying. Play with inferiority and you'll be infected. Character is contagious!

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

Some women don't mind making their husbands feel like thirty cents. And some even have a kind of a talent for making 'em feel that way.

At the Dour's house they had company, and Jim Dour went out to mix up a little lemonade or something for the guests.

"What is it?" he says.

"G, Jim," she says, "be yourself! I was talking to the dog, of course! He was about to knock over the fern on his poor little back."

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

Linnaeus (1707-1776) seems to have had no doubts of the fixity of species. It was only towards the close of the eighteenth century and with the increasing study of comparative anatomy and fossils that the fixity of species began to be questioned.

At first the fact of Evolution was seen piecemeal, as a possible change of one species into another within the boundaries of this or that restricted group of allied forms.

H. G. Wells

It was not apprehended as a process comprehending all living things. Perhaps all the carnivores were genetically related for example, or all the horned cattle.

It was then generally called Transformism. The word Evolution came later. And the question whether the process included man, was either not raised, or plainly or tacitly answered in the negative.

The first attempt to explain Transformism was to ascribe it to the effort of the living being to adapt itself to the often difficult condition under which it had to live.

The French naturalist Lamarck (1744-1829) pointed out that the individual was responsive to its circumstances, that it used and developed this organ and made little use of and therefore did not greatly develop that, "that within limits need and exercise called forth structure; and he supposed that these individual adaptations were in a measure inherited.

The three-toed horse—if we may use an example unknown to Lamarck—which under changing conditions was always scampering on firm prairies and scarcely ever going on soft ground, made no use of its once useful side toes, and so they were not stimulated to develop, while the business toe got all the work and all the benefit. The foals, according to the Lamarckian idea, inherited the enhanced main toe and the reduced side ones.

This line of argument was made extremely plausible by the known fact that we all develop best the organs we use most; the rower his biceps, the singer his chest. The weakness of the Lamarckian case, or at least the unproven assumption of it, was that the individual development was in any degree inherited.

In ordinary biological discussion the individual development is called an "acquired characteristic"; the size of the rower's biceps, for instance. Lamarck assumed the inheritance of acquired characteristics and found in that a partial explanation of Transformism.

To this day the belief in the inheritance of acquired characters is called Lamarckism. With the inclusion of an involuntary response to the environment (such as the response of growing trees to the direction of a prevailing wind, or the darkening of some birds' feathers when they are reared in a warm and humid atmosphere) and the inheritance of this response, it is called Neo-Lamarckism.

Lamarck's realization of at least a limited evolution of species. Transformism, was based on an infinitely smaller knowledge of fact than we have today. He relied chiefly on fossil shells, rudimentary structures, and the manifest anatomical resemblances of animals for his belief that Evolution occurred.

It was only later (1828) that Geoffrey St. Hilaire called attention to the embryological evidence for Evolution.

Several distinguished living biologists are Neo-Lamarckians. And the view has appealed to many people because of the moral attractiveness of the idea of effort achieving enduring consequences. Master what you can of mathematics and your child will compute with greater ease; be merciful and your children will find it less difficult to practice mercy.

One likes to think in that fashion. And with various additions and improvements Lamarckism is to be found vigorously paralleled in much modern thought outside the world of biological specialists. There has been added to the individual effort the idea of an upward driving force of a general sort.

Bergson finds an elan vital, George Bernard Shaw a life force, both mystical drives toward adaption coming from or acting through the organism. Both owe something, no doubt, to Schopenhauer's idea of a driving Will in things.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, May 17.—New York is finally in complete revolt against the cover charge. Two crowded restaurants at the moment herald in screaming lights: "No Cover Charge." Even the $1.50 dinner has struck a responsive note among the spenders.

Two, so priced and within a block of each other in the heart of the White Way, have a waiting line before dinner and after the play. Formerly such places were patronized almost solely by small-salaried folk enjoying a night out.

The astounding growth of the Chinese cafes is attributed to the foresight of owners who saw the death of the table tariff long before the rest of the food purveyors. Establishments of this order are now in complete control of the Broadway eating belt between Herald Square and the Circle.

The couvert was inspired shortly before the war by the intimate little rooms with postage stamp dance floors. They offered high priced orchestras and costly show floors and without this extra tax would have been unable to meet expenses.

Out of this necessitous beginning, the couvert developed into a racket. In some of the night clubs the charge ballooned to $4 on week days and $6 on Saturday night—offering nothing in return save the privilege of occupying a table. Even East Side cafeterias began adding a five cent tax.

New Yorkers who thought the gouge "smart" at first suddenly began to rebel. Right after the market smack, the $1.50 dinner, sans couvert, made its bow with a large dancing space and old time cabaret. The originators expected to attract only the meagre pursed.

Instead the crowds usually flocking to Parke avenue places began to drift in with an amused air of slumming. But they came back and brought friends. It may be one of those short-lived "stunts" but it has almost isolated expensive cafes.

* * *

Broadway's amusement and eating areas is on Saturday night almost entirely turned over to commuters. The Manhattanite is rarely seen. The big evening for natives at the theater is Tuesday night and Monday is similarly the big night in the restaurants.

A few strays: Will Rogers is bawled out every day by his wife for not combing his hair . . . . Joe Toplitzky buys 50 pajamas, $100 each, at a clip . . . . H. T. Webster has a form letter for crank letter writers . . . . Bud Fisher travels with an expert masseur . . . . Keating's vanishing bird cage was especially made at a cost of $600.

* * *

I know a headwaiter who is the father of two children and has been a widower for 11 years. Between duties he has cared for his children, done the cooking and the housework. In relief periods, he makes four trips to his home daily, taking a two-hour nap in the afternoon and sleeping only four hours at night. On his two weeks vacation, without pay, each summer he takes his children for a seashore outing.

The man who knows more people by first names in the theatrical world is doubtless Gene Buck. He is one of the few privileged to call E. H. Sothern "Eddie." He is also one of those of utterly untheatrical temperaments who is infatuated with the theater.

Mr. Buck, who came to New York stone blind from Detroit recovering his sight a year later, is usually chosen as the Collie—that is the manager of the Lambs Gambol—and is president of the Society of Authors and Composers, two jobs that would ordinarily take up the full time of two active men. He sandwiches them in with his own producing activities and finds time to go the round of the links tri-weekly with Ring Lardner.

It was the lamented Tad who told me Gene Buck had the perfect line for every man to read each day. It is: "Don't kid yourself."

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

In your department you may have a person who appears to be carrying a load of sorrow which almost overcomes him.

At the same time you blame him for his lack of interest in the things in which others about him are interested.

You may feel that he is a crank or a grouch and lacks stamina an adult should possess.

Do you ever try to help such a person to gain a degree of friendship which would encourage him to tell his trials in the hope of gaining some help from you?

Do you not keep aloof instead because you fear that he might need something practical that would make a demand on your time.

Isn't this selfish thought?

Just a few words of sympathy or some suggestions from you might lessen the weight of distress which all but overwhelms a fellow being.

You may have had similar experiences, and your plan of procedure might be followed by him with profit, as you profited by another's advice.

There are times in the lives of all when advice and counsel or words of sympathy give you the extra strength needed to overcome or bear burdens.
